TWO OFFICERS AND PRISONER SLAIN IN DUEL

MAN BEING ARRESTED ON LOITERING COUNT

Tattoo Marks on Killer's Arm May Give Clew to Identity.

FINGERPRINTS SENT TO CAPITAL BUREAU

Slayer Answers Description of Person Who Beat and Abducted Flier.

Macomb, Ill., Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Two policemen were shot to death and two were seriously wounded by an unidentified gunman who himself was killed in a savage pistol battle in front of the police station here early today.

The man had been picked up for loitering and because of his deadly resistance to an inconsequential arrest authorities believe he was a widely-sought criminal.

Tattoo Marks Clew.

On the killer's left arm, police found two tattoo marks, one the initial "W" and the other the insignia "U. S. A." surrounded by a circle.

Fingerprints were sent to the Department of Justice at Washington, the action being taken on the theory that the tattoo mark represented Army work.

Although no record of the gunman had been found tonight by various bureaus of identification, police of neighboring cities forwarded information in the hope of throwing some light on the case.

Flier Beaten and Gagged.

Deputy Sheriff Ben Harter, of Canton, Ill., said the body answered the description of a man hunted for the alleged abduction of Olaf Anderson, Jamestown, S. Dak., aviator. Anderson said he had been beaten and gagged after giving an automobile ride to a man and woman near Canton, Ill., last week; had been carried to a spot near St. Louis and there tossed into a ditch. His car later was found near Canton.

Anderson, in reporting the affair, said his abductor had tattoo marks on the left arm similar to those of the slain man.

Police of Centralia, Ill., learned that a man named Oliver Harding recently deserted a wife and children here. The woman was questioned tonight but her description of the missing husband did not tally with that of the slayer.

Free State Allegiance Assailed by Sinn Fein

Dublin, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—The Sinn Fein organization opened its annual congress today by adopting a resolution which declared allegiance to "the government of the Irish republic" an imaginary ideal. This action followed upon a raid yesterday on the head offices of the group in Dawson street, where documents were removed but no arrests were made.

M. J. O'Kelly was elected president of the organization today. Miss Mary MacSwiney, the Rev. M. Flannagan and Brian O'Higgins were chosen vice presidents. A decrease in the number of branches in Ireland was reported.

Judge Gets Employment For Confessed Vagrant

New York, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Morris Saltzberg had himself arrested as a vagrant and Magistrate Mogilesky ordered him acquitted because he was not.

"The charge is dismissed," the court said today. "I just got Saltzberg a job washing automobiles."

Ocean Hides Fate Of Fishing Vessel

San Pedro, Calif., Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Thus far the ocean has kept secret the fate of the fishing boat Fidelity and her crew of eleven men, missing since November 21. Despite a search by naval planes and six destroyers, no trace has been found of the boat, which left the fishing grounds off the Santa Barbara Islands during a windstorm that swept Southern California.

Four destroyers were called in yesterday and two Coast Guard patrol boats were ordered to carry on the search. So far no clew has been discovered, although a minute search has been made of all possible havens around the Santa Barbara and Santa Cruz Islands.

Calvin Coolidge

Says: The problems of the wage earners would be simplified by remembering he works not for money but for goods and service. Wages come out of production. The employer can not get them permanently out of any other source. Wages are raised or lowered with production.

Suppose all of us worked to build and maintain our own house and each room represented a day's work each week. A six-day week supplies a six-room house and five days supply five rooms.

If everybody immediately went on a five-day week with no decrease in the weekly money wage everybody would soon find the pay for a week would give only five rooms. The cost of the goods and services necessary to produce the rooms would increase as much as the work of the week decreased. A national five-day week with or without reduction of pay would leave everybody practically with five rooms instead of six. If we are not content with the six-room standard we can not get more by decreasing hours but by working more or by using machinery that increases production. The five-day week for every one is ultimately a question of living on a five or six room standard.

92,000 MINERS OUT; BRIEF STRIKE SEEN

British Optimists Believe Men Will Be Back at Work Tonight.

NATION BREATHES EASIER

London, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—A strike of 92,000 men in the coal fields of Scotland started today. Great Britain as a whole, however, breathed a sigh of relief as it appeared certain there would be no general stoppage of work in the coal fields tomorrow, when the new coal mines law goes into effect.

On Friday the situation appeared as dark as it could be. The miners' leaders in a great majority of the districts, as well as the delegate conference meeting in London, had decisively turned down the plan of 90 hours' work per fortnight—the "spreadover" system—which was the only alternative the owners could propose to a wage cut when the seven and one-half hour day becomes compulsory under the new mines act.

Then on Friday night the government intervened, and in telegrams to both the owners and miners in all districts urged some sort of temporary working agreement until further negotiations could be completed.

The course of events since has been a welter of complex negotiations varying from district to district, but the fact remains there will be no general stoppage of work tomorrow.

The Scottish situation is admittedly grave but just how grave no one at present can say. E. Shinwell, minister of mines, has been working almost incessantly since Friday to bring the Scottish owners and miners into line with the rest of the country, to come to some arrangement whereby the pits may be kept open if only on a day-to-day basis.

Optimists believe the men will be back at work by tomorrow night. On the other hand, strikes of these dimensions obviously contain potentialities both for a local upheaval and for extension of trouble to other districts.

Dead Black Bass Clog James River Mill Dam

Special to The Washington Post.

Lynchburg, Va., Nov. 30.—Twenty-eight dead black bass, some of them unusually large, were taken from the James River at Big Island yesterday, where they washed against grates on a paper mill dam. They were brought here to Dr. Mosby G. Perrow, head of the city department of public welfare.

Some of the fish were sent to the biological department of V. M. I. and some to the Bureau of Fisheries at Washington, D. C., for examination.

Woman's Purse Stolen at Church.

Dorothy E. Allen, 1816 E street northeast, reported to police yesterday that a purse, containing $10, had been stolen from the dressing room of St. Thomas Church at Eighteenth and Church streets northwest, while she was attending services.

TIDE OF ROBBERIES RISES IN COUNTRY

OTHER CRIMES INCREASE

(Associated Press.)

A rising tide of robberies in the United States since last June was disclosed yesterday in a bulletin issued by the Bureau of Investigation of the Justice Department based upon statistics from approximately 700 cities. A slight increase in the total of all crimes reported to police also was recorded by the October report, compiled by the bureau under the leadership of J. Edgar Hoover as part of an effort to obtain a uniform system of crime statistics for the country. The situation during the past month was described tersely as follows:

"The increase in robbery, apparent since June, but practically at a standstill at the time of the last monthly comparison, is resumed decidedly in October. Aggravated assaults showed a noticeable decrease, while offenses of larceny-theft under $50 increased in about the same ratio. Burglary declined somewhat, though not enough to warrant any special comment."

The bulletin reported that despite the decided increase in robberies there had been three times as many burglaries reported for the nine-month period, beginning in January.

The report for October, based upon returns from 879 cities, located in every State in the Union, as well as the District of Columbia, showed Detroit to have the largest number of crimes reported, with a total of 2,677 for the month. These included four murders, eight manslaughters by negligence, 24 cases of rape, 146 robberies, 64 aggravated assaults, 172 burglaries, 1,333 cases of larceny under $50 and 810 automobile thefts.

The total of all crimes reported during October in other cities follows: Los Angeles, 2,387; Cleveland, 1,884; San Francisco, 1,549; Philadelphia, 1,430; St. Louis, 1,363; Boston, 1,301; Baltimore, 1,001.

Statistics were not included for New York, while only partial returns were given for Chicago. The Mid-Western city on only partial returns, however, would rank third in the list with 1,968 reported crimes, excluding all cases of rape, aggravated assault and larceny-theft.

Chicago stood at the top of the list of reporting cities in the number of homicides, having twenty murders and twenty cases of manslaughter by negligence during the month. Philadelphia was next, with 13 murders and 28 cases of manslaughter by negligence. There followed St. Louis with twelve murders, Houston with nine and San Antonio with eight.

REDS TO MARCH UPON CONGRESS AS TERM OPENS

MILITANT FORCES MEET, 500 STRONG

Demand All Legislation That Curbs Foreign-Born Be Erased.

WORLD REVOLUTION IS THEIR KEYNOTE

President Hoover, Fish Quiz, Deportations, Government Itself Denounced.

Amid constant allusions to a world-wide Communist revolution, scathing denuncations, hisses and boos for the United States Government, President Hoover and other national figures, and the singing of the militant Internationale, 500 avowed Reds or Soviet sympathizers assembled here yesterday from every part of the Nation, to stage a monster demonstration at noon today on Capitol Hill.

Exactly 501 men, women and children, foreign-born of many nationalities and native-born, claiming to represent the sentiment of 327 organizations with a total membership of 271,000, thronged the auditorium of the National Press Building at a conference called by the national committee for the protection of the foreign-born, a group formed about five months ago in New York City.

Unable to obtain the same quarters, they met last night at the Whitelaw Hotel, a Negro hostelry, at Thirteenth and T streets northwest. Police picketed the area while while policemen and policewomen in plain clothes mingled with the delegates during the program.

Fiery Addresses Made.

Numerous inflammatory addresses were made as a mass protest primarily against the Fish committee investigating Communist activities, and against various immigration, deportation and miscellaneous laws affecting the foreign-born.

Its keynote speaker was a member of the central committee of the Communist party of the United States, Israel Amter, of New York City, who shared in the attack on the Federal Government, President Hoover, Representative Hamilton Fish, jr., of New York; William Green and Matthew Woll, of the American Federation of Labor, and others.

The committee in open session unanimously adopted two sweeping resolutions, seeking that Congress abolish all restrictions on quota immigration, all laws affecting political prisoners, all barriers of immigration

Democratic Leader and President Agree in Part on Aims.

SENATOR WILL SEEK RELIEF ON DROUGHT

His Measure on Farm Aid Said to Be Backed by Administration.

COURSE BEYOND SHORT SESSION IS CLOUDED

Chief Executive Emphasizes His Desire Again to Avoid Extra Term.

On the eve of the opening of Congress President Hoover and Senator Robinson, Arkansas, the Democratic leader, discussed and agreed, in part, yesterday upon a nonpartisan program seeking to lift the Nation from the economic depression.

The White House conference was in line with the pledge of the Republican and Democratic parties since the recent election to cooperate at this session on legislation of public welfare in the present economic crisis.

Senator Robinson, as the Democratic leader, will sponsor legislation to provide relief for the drought-stricken farmers. A measure drafted by him is understood to have administration approval and will be introduced immediately. Its terms were withheld pending introduction.

Road Aid Also Figures.

Bills to expand public building construction, Federal road aid and improvement of inland waterways also are included in the nonpartisan program, and are to be submitted as soon as President Hoover's recommendations to Congress are received in his annual message tomorrow.

There appears to be every assurance of a political truce in congressional ranks on unemployment and drought relief legislation and to the immediate accomplishment of this Congress will direct its efforts after the opening ceremonies.

But beyond this the course for the limited session ending next March 4 seems clouded.

President Hoover again emphasized his desire to avoid an extra session in the spring.

Senator Robinson, along with other Democratic and Republican congressional leaders, reiterated a desire to avoid such a meeting. But there was no assurance that the dreaded extra session could be averted.

Court Issue Disturbng.

The decision of Mr. Hoover to submit the World Court issue to this session still had the Senate Republican ranks in consternation and in Senator-Elect Will Be Asked to Stand Aside for Time Being.

NEW EXPENDITURES TOPIC OF INQUIRY,

Head of Committee Acts When Supplementary Report Is Filed.

SECRETARY IS SILENT ON SENATOR'S STAND

(Associated Press.)

Chairman Nye, of the Senate campaign funds investigating committee, announced yesterday that he intended to ask Senator-elect Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania, to stand aside today when he presents his credentials for entry in the Senate until the committee can inquire into reports of new expenditures in his campaign.

This decision was reached by Senator Nye upon receipt of word from Pennsylvania that a supplemental report of expenditures in the Republican primary had brought the total to about $520,000 spent in behalf of the Davis-Brown ticket. Francis Shunk Brown was candidate for governor on the ticket with Davis in the primary.

Senator Nye's request is expected to defer, at least temporarily, the seating of Mr. Davis, who retires today from the Labor post in President Hoover's Cabinet. Senator Nye said he would give assurance in making his request that the committee would complete its inquiry within "one or two days."

Main Contest Was Gubernatorial.

Senator Nye, nevertheless, emphasized that the inquiry by his committee had developed that the main contest in the Pennsylvania primary was over the Republican gubernatorial nomination. Gifford Pinchot defeated Mr. Brown in this race and Secretary Davis won over Senator Grundy in the senatorial contest.

Secretary Davis declined last night to comment on the action proposed by Senator Nye. He said he knew nothing about the additional expenditures into which the committee seeks to inquire. He added he was not sure whether he would go to the Senate today to present his credentials.

"I don't know anything about it," he said.

The controversy brings into dispute once more the seat to which William S. Vare was elected in 1926. After almost four years of inquiry and debate the Senate voted to deny Vare this seat because of expenditure of more than $700,000 in behalf of his ticket in the primary race.

Grundy Was Appointed.

Joseph R. Grundy was appointed by Gov. Fisher, of Pennsylvania, after the Senate rejected Vare. During the long controversy Vare was not permitted to occupy his Senate seat. Grundy entered office a year ago but was defeated in the primary for renomination by Secretary Davis.

A preliminary report Senator Nye was prepared to submit to the Senate today listed expenditures of $368,962 in behalf of the Davis-Brown ticket. On the basis of this report, which showed personal expenditures by Davis of only $10,747, Senator Nye did not intend to take any action against the Pennsylvanian, believing the principal amount of this expenditure was spent in the bitter fight over the gubernatorial nomination.

Yesterday, however, he sent special investigators to Harrisburg to check up on reports indicating increased expenditures in the Davis-Brown campaign. Senator Nye said he had been informed that the supplemental report filed by Samuel Vauclain, for the

FRIEND OF AVIATRIX DELAYED IN SEARCH

Capt. Lancaster Is Forced Down on Way to Join in Hunt for Australian.

BELIEVES WOMAN SAFE

Georgetown, S. C., Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Capt. W. N. Lancaster, associate of Mrs. J. M. Keith-Miller, Australian aviatrix missing since Friday on a Havana-Miami flight, was forced down here late today because of darkness. He was on his way from Pittsburgh to join the search for Mrs. Keith-Miller and plans to leave for Miami at daybreak tomorrow.

(Associated Press.)

Capt. William N. Lancaster, former flying companion of Mrs. J. M. Keith-Miller, took off for Miami, Fla., at 11:45 a. m. yesterday to join in the search for the missing Australian woman flier, who he believes may be still alive on some remote key.

The former British Royal Air Force officer arrived here Saturday from Pittsburgh in company with John Liggett, member of the Aerial Enterprise organization which sponsored Mrs. Keith-Miller's recent flight to Havana.

Together they made arrangements with Navy officers for the flight from Anacostia Station, which is expected to get Capt. Lancaster to Miami early today. Mr. Liggett followed this afternoon by train.

Capt. Lancaster's borrowed plane was piloted by Chief Aviation Pilot P. I. Gunn. The pair took off in the face of adverse weather conditions, but hoped to fly straight through to their destination, via Richmond, Va., and Savannah, Ga.

Once in Miami, Capt. Lancaster will attempt through the Pan-American Airways, Inc., or any other available means, to continue the search for Mrs. Keith-Miller.

"We haven't given up hope yet," Liggett said. Capt. Lancaster has implicit faith in her flying ability and believes it quite possible that she may have landed without serious damage in some remote place after finding herself off her course and out of gasoline.

Capt. Lancaster shared adventure with Mrs. Keith-Miller in a 13,000-mile flight from Croydon Field, England, to Australia in October, 1927. This flight first brought her into prominence as an aviator.

With her, the Royal Air Force officer faced sandstorms between Bagdad and Palestine, forced landings in India and Batavia, and an exciting air battle with a snake which crawled into the cockpit of their light two-seater in Burma.

Miami, Fla., Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Aviation officials today agreed in expressing the belief that Mrs. J. M. Keith-Miller, Australian aviatrix, per-

GIRL DIES OF SHOCK FOLLOWING ATTACK

Two Former Football Stars Among Four Arrested in Gary Case.

INQUEST WILL BE HELD

Gary, Ind., Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Miss Arlene Draves, 18, Emerson High School graduate, died here early today from what Chief Deputy Coroner Chester A. Owen described as shock following an attack. Four young men were held pending a coroner's inquest tomorrow.

Those taken into custody are Virgil Kirkland, 20, half back on last year's State championship Horace Mann Football Team; Leon Stanford, 21, former Emerson High grid star; Paul Barton, 21, and Harry A. Shirk, 24, son of a Gary fire captain.

Their arrest followed Kirkland's appearance at the Draves home about 2:30 a. m. today with the announcement: "Babe's dead," and his statement which officials said implicated the others, who had all attended a party in the home of David Thompson. Unable to revive the girl when leaving the party, Kirkland said, according to police, he and the others had taken her to Dr. R. O. Wharton. Upon learning Miss Draves had died, all fled before the physician could summon the coroner and police, but were later apprehended.

23-Minute Earthquake Registered in Denver

Denver, Colo., Nov. 30 (A.P.).—An earthquake of third degree intensity, lasting about 23 minutes, was recorded on the seismograph at Regis College here today starting at 2:37 p. m. (M. S. T.) and lasting until 3 p. m. It was reported by the Rev. A. W. Forstall, in charge of the institute.

The maximum came at 2:48 p. m. Father Forstall said the quake was from 1,500 to 2,000 miles from Denver and placed the center of the disturbance just off the North American Continent.

Pilot and Passenger Killed as Plane Falls

Stockton, Calif., Nov. 30 (A.P.).—An attempt to make a quick takeoff in a rented airplane cost the lives of two men on the Orange Brothers airport today. The dead were Frank W. Reed, 30, pilot, and Orlando Williams, 28, a passenger, both of Stockton.

Immediately after leaving the ground, observers said, Reed tried to climb too rapidly and his plane stalled 200 feet above the airport and crashed.

Eight Persons Drown When Barge Overturns

San Antonio, Chile, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—A barge carrying 25 passengers overturned today in the Maipo River near Lo Gallardo, and eight persons are believed to have drowned.

Only three bodies had been recovered tonight.

Soviet Industrial Plan May Take But 4 Years

Analysis of 5-Year Program, Started in 1928, Sets Forth Great Strides in One of Most Momentous Experiments in Present-Day History.

For the last two years the Soviet Union has been concentrating its energies on one of the most momentour experiments in present-day history—an effort to place the union and its 150,000,000 inhabitants on a modern industrial basis in five years.

From one end of the world to the other, this huge undertaking of seeking to bridge over the gap from a frequently primitive and backward industrial development to a modernized one has been watched with the keenest interest.

The Associated Press herewith presents exclusively an exhaustive and official analysis from the Soviet viewpoint of what has been accomplished by the Soviet Union in the last two years, and what are the hopes of those responsible for fulfillment of the five-year plan, or Piatiletka, as it is known in Russia. The analysis was prepared by Valerian V. Kuibyshev, vice president of the Council of People's Commissars and president of the State Planning Commission, which drew up the five-year plan.

(Copyright, 1930, and all rights reserved by the Associated Press.)

Moscow, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Claims of full success for Soviet Russia's momentous five-year plan and confident prediction that it will be fulfilled—not in five years, but in four—are contained in an exhaustive analysis of the plan's first two years of operation by Valerian V. Kuibyshev, president of the state planning commission.

In a study of comparative figures giving the estimates for the first two years and what he described as the actual results, the man responsible for the plan's operation told the Associated Press the question of fulfillment in scheduled time is no longer a problem, as this task already has been exceeded.

"The present task," he said, "consists of fulfillment of the plan before schedule, that is, in four years."

The text of M. Kuibyshev's analysis follows:

"On October 1 ended the second year of Piatiletka (the five-year plan), that same Piatiletka which excited the minds of the whole world and over which the bitterest discussion has been, and continues to be, conducted in the pages of the press throughout the world.

"Who does not remember the claims advanced by the greatest bourgeois economists and politicians that the estimates of the five-year plan were unreal, utopian and fantastic?

"Who does not remember talk that the estimates of Piatiletka were mere Bolsheviat delirium? To this day cries are heard of the failure of Piatiletka, failure of the far-reaching plan for the reconstruction of the national economy of the Soviet Union.

"The past two years' operation of the plan furnishes sufficient material both for verifying the reality of the plan's provisions and for verifying the justice of the objections and doubts which the plan aroused among representatives of bourgeois economic

Post's Christmas Toy Fund Needs Help From Everyone

Contributions Will Be Devoted to Making Happy at Yuletide Those Children Who Otherwise Would Find Santa Claus Had Overlooked Them.

The Washington Post's campaign to make every boy and girl in Washington happy this Christmas is officially on. Here's an opportunity for every man, woman and child who has the means to help out some family where fate has not been so kind.

Send in a contribution to The Washington Post's Christmas Toy Fund. It is to be devoted to making children happy. Organized charities are caring for needy families, so far as food and clothing are concerned but unless the residents of the Capital rally to the cause, many of the children will spend a very unhappy Christmas.

When other children are receiving gifts and playthings of every description, these poor boys and girl will be gazing into empty stockings and looking out of windows enviously as youngsters go by, showing their new toys to friends.

Christmas without some sort of cheer for the little ones is no Christmas at all. For that reason, The Post has decided to make this appeal for a fund with which to buy the things

Veterans' Show to Aid Idle Stopped at Philadelphia

Philadelphia Clergyman's Protest Against Blue Law Violation Undoes Permission Given to Foreign Wars Group to Give Movie.

Philadelphia, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Police stopped a picture show being given tonight in the Kent Theater under the auspices of members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars to aid the city's unemployed, ordered the audience to disperse and arrested three persons. Under the State blue laws of 1794, Sunday amusements are forbidden.

War veterans said a police permit for the entertainment had been obtained several days ago, but this was canceled because a delegation of clergymen had protested to Director of Public Safety Schofield.

Members of two American Legion posts joined forces with sponsors of the show and, led by a band playing "Onward Christian Soldiers," marched to the theater, where several hundred men and women had gathered. Police were on hand to prevent the entertainment.

When the doors opened the crowd was so great the police were swept aside and about 1,000 entered the theater. More police were sent, and when they threatened to tear down the screen the show's sponsors agreed to call it off. Those arrested were accused of disorderly conduct.

Brown-Davis committee, showed the expenditure of almost $130,000 more than was originally reported. When he appeared before the Senate committee Vauclain listed expenditures by his committee of $129,693, but he said he would have to supplement this with a final report.

Thinks Others May Increase.

Senator Nye expressed apprehension yesterday that if Vauclain's final report showed a considerable increase over first expenditures, the final reports of the other Pennsylvania committees might do likewise.

Brown-Davis campaign committee, $129,693; Brown-Davis citizens Republican committee of Philadelphia, $62,575; Brown-Davis western Pennsylvania committee, $77,425; Allegheny County committee, $88,460; Davis personal expenditures, $10,747.

No other protests against new members eligible to be sworn in today are contemplated by the Nye committee. The new members include: Morrow, of New Jersey, and Carey, of Wyoming, Republicans; Bulkley, of Ohio; McGill, of Kansas, and Williamson, of Kentucky.

ROBINSON TO HELP HOOVER PROGRAM considerable doubt whether it would not lead to an extra session.

Senator Robinson, an advocate of the World Court, said he saw little hope for action on the proposal.

"Undoubtedly," he added, "appropriation bills and relief measures will have the right of way, and I am doubtful if any action can be taken on the World Court at this session."

As for the full unemployment and drought relief program, Senator Robinson stated after the White House conference he would wait to see Mr. Hoover's message to Congress before announcing his views.

The controversial Muscle Shoals question comes up for immediate attention this week. Senator McNary (Republican), Oregon, chairman of the conferees, intends to call a meeting today or tomorrow.

Deadlocked on Shoals.

The Senate and House are deadlocked. The Senate has passed the bill of Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, for Government operation of the power and nitrate plant; the House is insisting upon its bill for private operation. This controversy apparently must be solved if the extra session is to be avoided.

While only the brief ceremonies are on the program for the opening session, there is prospect of some action in the Senate over the right of Senator-elect Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, to take his seat.

Chairman Nye of the campaign funds investigating committee said yesterday he would ask the senator-elect to stand aside temporarily, while the committee investigated reports of additional expenditures in his primary campaign.

Message Read Tomorrow.

Tomorrow the annual message of President Hoover will be read separately to the Senate and House. Then the grind will begin without further preliminaries.

The Senate will take up the House bill for regulation of motor bus traffic. The House will start work on the first of the vital appropriation bills whose enactment is necessary to avoid an extra session.

The Senate also soon will have before it more than a score of important nominations, including that of William N. Doak, of Virginia, to be Secretary of Labor, the entire personnel of the new Tariff Commission, the members of the new Power Commission and a host of judicial appointees.

State Horticultural Society Will Meet

More than 300 delegates are expected to attend the convention, which will open Tuesday night. The visitors will be welcomed by Dr. Wilbur Nelson, president of the local chamber of commerce and head of theh department of geology of the University of Virginia, and the response will be made by Edward Nininger, of Roanoke.

Another Bus Line Begins Operating to Capital

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Nov. 30—The third bus line to operate over western Virginia highways, between Washington and Knoxville—Shenandoah stages—began operation tonight with twelve buses. The company also operates a branch between Winchester and Chambersburg, Pa.

A Federal injunction will be asked at Norfolk tomorrow to permit the line to operate through Virginia, pending the granting of a certificate by the Virginia Corporation Commission. The move, the bus line says, is a mere formality.

LEGISLATION URGED BY SHIPPING BOARD

END OF ACTIVITIES SEEN

(Associated Press.)

Looking ahead to the end of the business depression and the time when it will be freed of its duties with the emergency fleet, the Shipping Board yesterday proposed legislation to aid it in supervising development of the American Merchant Marine.

"The year has been one of marked depression in the realm of world shipping," it said in its annual report, "but, nevertheless, American ship owners are augmenting their fleets in order to be in a strategic competitive position when normal conditions again prevail.

"Coincident with these plans for the future on the part of American owners, the liquidation of Government tonnage is proceeding as rapidly as conditions warrant. It is a matter of deep satisfaction to the board that the end of the Government's activities as an operator of merchant ships is already in sight."

Suggested Legislation.

Heading the list of legislation the board asked of Congress were:

Provision for the award of ocean mail contracts to purchasers of board lines.

Preventing the award of such contracts to American lines operating foreign-flag ships in competition with American-flag ships.

Transfer to private lines the business now handled by Army and Navy transports and the Panama Railroad Steamship Line.

Provision of funds for the creation of a naval reserve.

Government aid for American ships not given mail contracts.

Limited experimentation with foreign trade zones, or free ports.

A definite interest rate on construction loans.

Insurance Changes Sought.

Raise the construction loan limitation from $150,000,000 to $250,000,000.

Ratify and make effective the agreements reached at the various international marine conferences.

The board proposed various changes in the present insurance policy.

Reviewing its activities during the past year, the board said although it had outlined no definite program for pay roll reduction in 1930, it actually had reduced its pay roll 23 per cent during the pear by dropping 711 employes who received annual salaries and wages of $870,872.

The board foresaw the end of its activities as director of the Government's operation of merchant ships.

Within a year, the report said, only a negligible number of lines will remain unsold. These, under the lump sum agreement with operators, would soon be owned by private interests.

An American-manned as well as an American-owned merchant fleet was nearing fulfillment. Three shipping routes heretofore not served by American flag lines were incorporated during the year.

Employment Found.

Through its sea service bureau the board had found employment for 65,606 seamen, of which 89.6 per cent were American citizens. In 1914 less than 15 per cent were Americans.

Twenty-two steamship companies were authorized to receive loans for construction of 49 vessels or for the conversion of 13 vessels.

The loans totaled $114,564,715, of which $43,050,800 had been advanced prior to June 30, 1930. Subsequently the total loans authorized had been increased to $131,793,003.

Only 466 vessels still were in Government hands on June 30, while 1,329 of the 1,797 American ships of 1,000 tons or over were privately owned. During the year the board sold 100 ships for approximately $4,269,718.

State May Lose Federal Hatchery

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 30.—Prices asked by owners for land and springs rights needed in a projected establishment of a $75,000 Federal hatchery for bass in the Leetown section of Jefferson County today threatened to lose the project for West Virginia, with the likelihood that it might go to Maryland, according to word received here from Washington.

The impasse—wherein the Government refused to consider what it regarded as exorbitant prices for areas needed—was disclosed, the information said, after a conference between United States fish commission authorities and Representative Frank L. Bowman, representing the Second District of West Virginia, in which the territory in question lies.

The development was projected under a $75,000 appropriation made by Congress last year, which was backed by Representatives Bowman and Fred L. Zihlman, of Maryland. The statement after the conference today in Washington was that the Government desired the Leetown properties, which the hatchery authorities regard as having the desired facilities, but the Government would not spend as much of the appropriation for the properties as was asked.

against Chinese, Japanese and Hindus, the Mexican immigration requirements and all laws by States, counties or cities discriminating against the foreign-born.

Plans Demonstration.

Elaborate arrangements were made for the entire number of delegates to stage a demonstration with banners flaunting, on Capitol Hill upon the reconvening of Congress at noon. A delegation of 25 persons each will appear at the Senate and House chambers to ask that its demands be approved.

Many banners and placards are to be displayed similar to those posted yesterday in their meeting with the slogans, "Down With Registration, Fingerprinting and Deportation," "We Demand the Release of Political Prisoners" and "Down With Lynching, Jim Crowism and Segregation."

The resolutions were characterized as "a call to action to the millions of American foreign-born and native-born, Negro and white," against "the bosses crushing the 9,000,000 unemployed in this country" with "the Government trying to divide the workers." They very emphatically claimed that "the United States Government is strengthening its alliances with France, Great Britain and others for war against Soviet Russia."

Presented by Chicagoan.

The resolutions were presented by a Negro identified only as "Comrade Squier, of Chicago," who pictured the world powers combining to obliterate the Soviet.

"We must defend the Soviet Union, comrades," he shouted. "The slogan of the workers must be: Unite and Fight! The working people have no other government than the Soviet Union. We have nothing to lose but our chains. I was an officer in the American Army during the World War; now I am a revolutionary leaders and organizer. We pledge our support to our last drop of blood to the foreign-born.

"We, as a conference of the workers, reject all bills like the Aswell, the Blease, the Cabel bills, and the activities of the Fish committee. We reject the Government trying to photograph us, fingerprint us, deport us, restrct the foreign-born in any way or register us."

Cheers Greet Remarks.

Cheers and prolonged applause were given at the frequent favorable reference by speakers to Soviet Russia and the retiterated raps at President Hoover. The "Internationale" was sung repeatedly as the gathering moved to a spirited climax with adoption of the resolutions.

RAIL BONDS DECLINE; TREASURY LIST FIRM

German Issues Score During Week; Latin Americans Are Mixed.

GAIN IN NEW FINANCING

New York, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—In a week broken by the Thanksgiving holiday, the bond market gave a ragged performance to close a month in which the trend has been highly irregular.

While United States Governments moved forward and highly liquid corporate domestic issues held their ground fairly well, other listed obligations of American corporations were under the spell of adverse influences. Persistent selling of carrier obligations, some of the highest grade, but largely second grade and speculative issues, was the chief factor in accentuating the lower trend of the domestic group.

Although without definite information, bond circles surmised that rails were depressed by some very large offerings and one deduction was that this selling originated with banks that have recently been in difficulties. The fact that high grade issues in other classifications moved contrariwise gave some support to that conclusion.

Rails Reach New 1930 Lows.

The downward trend carried many second-grade and speculative rails to new 1930 minimums, and the average for 30 bonds dipped to a new low for the year during the week. Stock privilege issues underwent a sharp downward revision in sympathy with shares where selling was induced by the statement of a prominent railroad executive that the carriers face an "emergency." This also contributed to the weakness in liens, as some investors who have been ready buyers of railroad bonds became hesitant, thus weakening support.

The strong tone of United States Governments was virtually the only encouraging aspect of the market. The large turnover in this group on a rising market has been attributed to much shifting from bonds of corporations whose outlook has been clouded by diminished earnings. Liberty 3½s advanced nearly a quarter of a point and Liberty first 4¼s and fourth 4¼s and two short-term Treasury issues joined the forward movement, reaching the best levels since 1928.

Bank Buying Noted.

Banks have been adding governments to their portfolios at a rapid rate. The increase for the week ended last Wednesday by Federal Reserve member banks was $42,000,000, while other investment holdings were $5,000,000 less.

Foreign bonds cut a wide swath. Latin Americans were highly irregular. Argentine Governments were 1 to 2 points higher, but Brazilians, Chilean and Peruvian bonds lost ground. Trading in Europeans was featured by the firming of German obligations. German 5¼s rallied more than 2 points from the record low reached the previous week and the 7s, less affected by the selling, were very stable.

The sharp increase in new financing that developed in the third week of November after a very lean period proved short lived. While the holiday had some affect in curtailing offerings, the total of $46,874,000, less than half in the previous week, largely reflected the unsettled conditions in the bond market. The month's total approximated $203,000,000, which compared with the August total of $202,793,000, the smallest of the year.

DAVIS WILL RENEW EFFORTS ON STRIKE

PLANS NOT INDICATED

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Davis said last night he planned additional action in an effort to settle the textile strike at Danville, Va., so that his desk will be clear of major labor disputes when he becomes a senator from Pennsylvania.

Secretary Davis Saturday invited owners of textile mills at Danville to come to Washington Sunday to attend church with him and then attempt to settle the difficulty.

The Cabinet member said yesterday the owners had informed him they were unable to make the trip. He did not indicate what further action he contemplated.

Secretary Davis is scheduled to take the senatorial oath today, but Chairman Nye of the Senate campaign funds investigating committee plans to ask postponement.

Pickets to Be Restored.

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., Nov. 30.—While officials of the local textile union felt cheered today at the action of Gov. Pollard in maintaining the right of union pickets to operate outside the Dan River Mill, C. G. Garrison, public relations official of the union, admitted that it was a somewhat hollow victory since with it went the order of Sheriff Murphy that no picket fires would be allowed. This was done on account of the State law which forbids fires on any State highway.

The union can not trespass on bordering property owned by the mill company. Mr. Garrison also said that the pickets probably would be restored to duty outside the mill early tomorrow morning, but that so far the union leaders had received no official word from the county sheriff of his revised instructions. The weather moderated here today.

Answer to Davis Not Admitted.

If any answer was made today to the personal plea of Secretary of Labor James J. Davis to the mill management to send representatives to Washington for a mediation conference in the hope that industrial peace might be restored here before Davis yields his portfolio as a Cabinet member, there was no official knowledge of it here.

It was learned that any statement bearing on a further development of this angle would have to come from Mr. Davis himself, who withheld the actual text of the message he is said to have sent to H. R. Fitzgerald, mill president.

Military vigilance was not relaxed at Schoolfield today. The guardsmen held religious service while squads were conducting a roving patrol of the mill property and adjacent villages to Schoolfield.

Threats Are Reported.

Capt. R. T. Warner, adjutant, stated this evening that a number of people had reported to the military authorities saying they had been threatened by telephone. He said additional troops would guard the opening of the mills tomorrow, this apparently in view of the reports reaching nonunion workers that they might expect resistance.

Upon representations of R. W. Wynn, hotel proprietor, Col. Opie placed a special guard around Wynn's hotel today. The place was stormed Tuesday night and windows broken.

At 2 o'clock this morning the first emergency call for troops reached headquarters. A squad responding found a neighborhood fight at Stokes Island, near Schoolfield, but no arrests were made when the principals of two groups said they would pay for damage done to property by stone throwing.

Canada exported passenger cars and trucks valued at $1,878,525 in September, an increase of 16 per cent over August.

GENTRY OF ITALY MAY LOSE LAND

ELSE THEY LOSE ACRES

Rome, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Landed families that have long been among Italian aristocracy may find themselves stripped of their estates unless they actually undertake the farming of their lands under the new Fascist program for the encouragement of scientific agriculture.

This program makes the ownership of farm land contingent on "good behavior." And the Fascist idea of good behavior in a farmer means the elimination of small tracts of land, the employment of modern machinery and above all constant supervision of the actual work. The lands of small independent farmers who do not comply with these rules are condemned to be sold.

Such a sale is conducted by the government, which pays the old owner the value of his unimproved land in 30 annual installments. The farm is sold to some new owner who pays for it at the same valuation, also in 30 years.

On the other hand, should an owner wish to undertake the modernizing himself, the government will pay 60 per cent of the cost and lend the remainder on long-term notes.

It has been recently pointed out that these rules concern absentee landlords just as well as independent peasant farmers.

Mussolini has avoided disputes with the aristocracy since his march on Rome in 1922, but with the farm land program being cosidered as of prime importance to the future welfare of Italy he is expected now to enforce his ideas.

Most of the richest lands in the Campagna district, potentially a great wheat producing area, are owned by a few families. The lands are for the most part unimproved, but due to their huge holdings the owners have been able to maintain themselves in Rome, Paris or on the Riviera in luxury.

TOBACCO MARKET TO REOPEN TODAY

ACTIVE TRADING IS SEEN

Special to The Washington Post.

Petersburg, Va., Nov. 30.—After being closed over the holiday Petersburg's tobacco market will reopen tomorrow with promise of large offerings, indications pointing to a continued high price average with continued increase in quality, which will mean sustained high marks.

The three days of the past week on which the market was open saw the largest offerings in the history of the local market. Bright tobacco was the chief type offered and the average price for the product remained high. Dark tobacco was of very inferior quality and but a few thousand pounds were offered for sale.

Sales last week totaled 350,864 pounds on the bright market and brought a total of $42,965.22. The average price for the weed was $12.25.

Dark leaf sales totaled but 9,202 pounds and brought only $383.52, an average of $4.17. Warehousemen do not view this slow average with alarm, as it represents the average price paid for what probably proved the most inferior grades of dark leaf that will be offered here this season. They expect a steady increase in price and grade of this type of tobacco as the season progresses.

All local warehouses are preparing for an active period of trading when they reopen tomorrow morning. So far this season the Petersburg tobacco market has made an excellent record.

The seals this year will be distributed through the mail, and will not be sold by the Fairfax County school children. The percentage of tuberculosis in Fairfax County is already large and has been steadily increasing. The lack of proper foods has been a big factor in accounting for the increase this year. Petersburg Officials Searching for Firebug

Special to The Washington Post.

Petersburg, Va., Nov. 30.—Incendiary fires have become so frequent in Petersburg of late that City Manager Paul S. Morton has demanded that the police department put forth every effort to apprehend the firebug, for whose arrest and conviction a reward of $100 has been offered.

Most of these fires, totaling thirteen, have occurred in vacant buildings and in practically the same section.

Water Famine Caused By Letting Spigots Run

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 30.—Today's rain came in time to help the town of Midland, in this county, from a water famine, indirectly caused by the extreme cold of Thursday, when residents left their house spigots open and let water run all night. This drained the supply in the reservoir. People had to haul water from springs and cisterns. Those having steam heating plants have been hauling water for boilers.

CORNER STONE LAID FOR COUNTY CHURCH

ANCIENT GAVEL USED

ARLINGTON COUNTY.
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Phone: Clarendon 500. Clarendon, Va.

More than 100 members of the congregation of the Arlington Presbyterian Church stood with uncovered heads in a downpour of rain, as the pastor, the Rev. William F. Wolfe, laid the corner stone for the new $20,000 church located at the intersection of Columbia Pike and Spring Drive road.

In laying the stone, the pastor used the gavel which George Washington used in laying the corner stone of the United States Capitol Building. The gavel, which is now the property of Potomac Lodge, No. 5, F. A. A. M., of the District of Columbia, was handed the pastor by Past Master Walter K. Handy, chairman of the committee from the lodge in whose care the gavel was placed. The other members of the committee were Past Masters W. S. Waddey and A. S. McCoy.

The exercises opened with the invocation delivered by the Rev. E. H. Puryear, pastor of the Arlington Baptist Church, followed by singing by the congregation in attendance.

The address was delivered by the Rev. Alfred Barrows, of Washington. Another speaker was Chester R. Smith, moderator of the Presbytery of the District of Columbia.

The exercises concluded with the benediction by the pastor.

The building will be of stone construction and is being erected by William M. Dawson. The plans and specifications were prepared by A. F. Thelander, architect, of Arlington County.

That every section of Arlington County should have an adequate approach to the new Memorial Bridge and that the 5 miles of additional State highway, to which the county is entitled, should be allotted with a view to bringing about such a consequence, is the gist of resolutions which will be presented to the Arlington County Civic Federation at its meeting tomorrow night by Arthur Orr, delegate from Lyon Park.

"The construction and opening of the new bridge," said Mr. Orr last night, "is the most important physical event in the history of the county. It is to the interest of the county as a whole that every section be provided with a convenient and adequate highway approach to the bridge. The accomplishment of that end should be the controlling factor in determining the allocation of the new State highway mileage."

Among the highway adjustments recommended in the resolution is the cut-over from Lee highway to Rucker avenue through Lion Village to Wilson boulevard in the vicinity of the courthouse, thence by way of Washington avenue through Fort Myer Heights to the bridgehead.

"This road," said Mr. Orr, "will serve the traffic coming down Lee highway through Cherrydale and will enable it to reach the new bridge by a new and direct route, avoiding the congested Rosslyn area. It also will serve the Wilson boulevard traffic originating east of the Clarendon station. Traffic having its origin west of the Clarendon business section naturally will follow the John Marshall highway to its Porter Woods connection with the Lee boulevard. The two latter highways have already been adopted by the State."

Another important connection mentioned in the resolution is that of the Columbia pike in the vicinity of Clarke Station.

Mount Vernon avenue, according to the resolution, will probably require but a slight adjustment, involving only a few hundred feet of roadway.

The annual meeting of the Arlington Volunteer Fire Department, at which time officers will be elected, will be held Wednesday night at the Buckley avenue firehouse.

Those who have been nominated for the various offices are as follows: For president, Julian E. Tapp; for vice president, John A. Dawkins; for secretary-treasurer, Elmer J. Blackmer; for assistant secretary-treasurer, Norman T. Meyers; fire chief, A. C. Scheffel; for deputy chief, Thomas Snoots, Edward Goldblatt and Charles Snoots; for fire marshal, John W. Travis, William McAtee, G. C. Flemming and Norman T. Meyers; for captain, Charles Snoots, Carl Scheffel and Warren Snoots; for lieutenant, Carl Scheffel, Edward Goldblatt, Paul Scheffel, James Decatur and G. C. Flemming; for members of the board of directors, Herbert Wilson, V. Ehrhardt, John R. Mossburg, George Cook, J. E. Bamforth and Joseph Doyle, jr.

The present members of the board of directors will hold its last meeting prior to the election the same evening at 7:30 o'clock.

The county health department has certified the following pupils from the James Monroe School at Aurora Heights as five-point health children: First grade—Leonard Mathusa, Elizabeth Reiners, Allyn Clark, Fred Marlowe, Clyde Rees, Katherine Keith, Virginia Callahan, Barbara Mann, Wilbur Benedict, June Myers, Margery Weaver and Anne Bennett.

Pledges for sufficient funds to carry on the church work for the year 1931 were secured.

Arlington Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, will hold its monthly meeting tomorrow night at the home of Mrs. J. W. Myers, 66 Marion avenue, at Clarendon.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Nov. 30.—After nine years of work and the expenditure of $400,000, West Virginia's new State code has become an actuality.

The first copy of the bulky tome to come from the printer and binder was presented to Gov. William G. Conley. One hundred copies will be turned over daily to E. E. Hood, State printing clerk, by the printers until the order of 3,000 copies had been filled. Several thousand orders for volumes, which will be sold for $15 each, have been received.

The first resolution for codification of the State laws was introduced in the 1921 Legislature, but failed of adoption. Shortly after that Legislature adjourned, a code commission was appointed by former Gov. E. F. Morgan. The code committee's report, made public in 1927, was not accepted and a legislative committee was appointed to revise it. Following that committee's report this year, the printing of the volumes was ordered. The actual printing took only six weeks, but the making of the index occupied about four months.

Each copy contains the revision and codification of all existing laws of the State to date, the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution of the United States and the State and Federal laws governing naturalization.

The legislature specified that all town councils and county courts shall purchase copies.

PROGRAM OF CAROLS PLANNED FOR AGED

Junior Board of Alexandria Institution to Sing December 18.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone: Alexandria 523.

The junior board of the Anne Lee Memorial Home for the Aged is making plans for the presentation of a program of Christmas carols at the home on December 18, with Miss Sue Rishell and Miss Margaret Ogden in charge.

At the meeting of the board last week a Thanksgiving offering of provisions for the home was presented. Mrs. Richard B. English presided. Mrs. Walter Cockerill and Mrs. R. Samuel Luckett reported that they had visited the home as representatives of the junior board during the month. Mrs. Leroy Peabody gave a reading and Miss Margaret Ogden sang, accompanied at the piano by James Walkers.

The Thanksgiving offering at several of the city churches was divided between the Anne Lee Home and the Alexandria Hospital in accordance with the usual custom.

The Washington Society of Alexandria is making plans for the celebration on January 14 of the 131st anniversary of its founding, with a program of Nation-wide interest, the proceeds to be devoted to a fund for relieving the unemployment situation in Alexandria.

The society has sent letters to each of the larger organizations of the city asking their aid in making the affair a success. Details of the program have not been fully worked out, but will be announced later.

The committee in charge of the restoration of the old Presbyterian Meeting House is planning for the restoration of the colonial setting of the old cemetery surrounding the church, the plans including the construction of a brick wall around the grounds, similar to walls surrounding other cemeteries of the same period, and also the complete restoration of the old manse which stands within the inclosure.

The committee has recenly received a check for $1,000 for this purpose from the Edwin Gould Foundation for Children, the incentive for this donation being the fact that in this cemetery is the grave of the Unknown Soldier of the Revolution, which is under the care of the National Society of the Children of the American Revolution, which society collected funds for the erection of the tomb of the Unknown Revolutionary Soldier.

The Girls' Friendly Society of Christ Episcopal Church will meet in the parish hall tomorrow afternoon for a sale of Christmas gifts, home-made cookies and doughnuts.

The Allison W. C. T. U. will meet tonight with the Misses Graves, 623 South Fairfax street. It is stated that this will be a meeting of special interest to all members, and a full attendance has been requested.

The Rev. Dr. Clay I. Hudson, of Nashville, Tenn., will conduct a church administration conference in the First Baptist Church each night this week, the purpose being to stimulate and make more efficient the church and school officers in their work. All officers and teachers have been urged to attend these meetings, and a welcome has been extended to any other members and friends who desire to attend.

Petersburg's Banks Mail Out $250,000

The Virginia National Bank leads the list with 2,200 club depositors, who will receive a total of $75,000, next is the Petersburg Savings & American Trust Co. with 1,500 depositors who will get $65,000.

A total of 900 depositors will receive $40,000 from the National Bank of Petersburg. The Morris Plan Bank will distribute $37,500 to 870 club members while the City Savings & Loan Corporation will mail $31,500 to 1,200.

POST'S TOY FUND NEEDS AID OF ALL that boys and girls want to buy but for which many parents, this year especially, will not have the money.

Depression, unemployment and illness have caused shortages in many homes where ordinarily no help would be needed. These parents want to see their children happy at Christmas but are unable to devise any way to purchase anything except necessities.

Every contribution to The Post's Toy Fund will insure some child a happy Christmas. The money raised will be distributed through the Council of Social Agencies which, through its other work, has lists of families where such gifts will be appreciated. But best of all, the distribution of toys will be made through the parents of the children.

Giving is a virtue, but there are times when it hurts as many as it helps. The Post wants every boy and girl to look to his or her parents for the things which other children receive from dads and mothers. So the money from The Post Fund will be given to the parents to buy what Johnny and Dorothy have asked for. If it's a doll with blue eyes that Mary wants that is what Mary will get. And if Frankie has asked for a ladder truck, a ladder truck will be found Christmas morning.

This idea, it is believed, will succeed in spreading joy not only to the children but to the parents. No one likes to sit back and see others help children when they themselves are unable to do so.

The Post has opened the fund with $100. Contributions of any size are acceptable. It doesn't require much to furnish a toy for a child. And the smiles on children's faces will repay any sacrifice made to help the cause along. The fund will be open from now until Sunday, December 21. Dig deep and enable everybody in Washington to enjoy Christmas. Send your pennies, nickels, dimes and dollars to the Toy Fund Editor of The Post. You will then have done your good turn.

FRENCH INTERESTED IN U. S. AGREEMENT

Tardieu's Overture Stirs Nation-Wide Comment; Peace Move Seen.

GOLD HOARDS ARE CITED

Paris, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Premier Tardieu's call for a real working, financial and economic agreement between France and the United tates, made in a Thanksgiving Day address before the American Club, has aroused Nation-wide interest. It was observed tonight that while French statesmen of other days have sought ententes with Great Britain or Russia, as circumstances suggested, Premier Tardieu appears to have thrown his force, particularly in working out what might be called a nonpolitical agreement, with the American republic.

Friends of Tardieu pictured him as not having any great interest at present in disarmament agreements because he deems that France and the United States have before them the more pressing problem of international economic ills and the necessity of putting on their feet nations which are being crushed by disturbances, economic laws and by overproduction of raw materials.

Tardieu welcomes the exercise of American political influence in Europe because he is convinced it is disinterestedly beneficial.

French-Italian Accord Hoped.

A correspondent of the Associated Press was informed today that Hugh S. Gibson, United States Ambassador to Belgium, already has achieved considerable success in paving the way for an eventual settlement of the outstanding questions, including the naval problem, between France and Italy.

This, however, does not mean that an agreement is in sight, and there was no confirmation of a report spread in international circles that Tardieu and Premier Mussolini, of Italy, will meet on a warship in the Mediterranean on Christmas and get down to brass tacks on Franco-Italian difficulties.

An economist remarked tonight that since France and the United States have the biggest gold hoardings in the world they possess between them a card against war.

It was insisted this card can be held in hand by refusing credits to nations which indulge in war talk.

Kellogg Pact Bulwark.

It was argued that without joining the League of Nations and entering an official league economic and financial blockade against nations menacing the world with war, the United Sttes can potently reinforce the Kellogg peace pact by refusing financial aid to countries who talk belligerently.

A spokesman for the Government said today there was no agreement said today there was no agreement of this nature between the governments of France and the United States, but there is general belief here that the banking interests of the two republic will act along this line.

French newspapers give prominence to a statement by the Italian Embassy that Italy has not asked for foreign loans, and therefore none has been refused.

Premier Tardieu has been giving an increasing amount of time to visiting Americans like George L. Harrison, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, who represent vital American interests. He continues to drive home his conviction that Europe must be reconstructed economically so that prosperity may return and world buying power increase.

Boy Hunted in Woman's Shooting.

With a bullet wound in her left jaw and the back of her neck, Julia Johnson, Negress, 50 years old, of Third and C streets southwest, is in a critical condition at Providence Hospital. An 18-year-old Negro boy is being sought for the shooting. The scene of the trouble was in front of the woman's home.

Italian Border Patrol Ambushed.

Canale, Italy, Nov. 30 A.P.).—A border patrol of six soldiers was ambushed in the mountains near the Jugo-slavian line this afternoon and one soldier was killed in the exchange of firing.

SOVIET PROGRAM SPEEDED

thought. The past two years have revealed Piatiletka being exceeded in the most important sections of the national economy.

"In planned industries the value of the first two years of output under Piatiletka is estimated, in unchanging prices, at 29,338,000,000 rubles (about $14,690,000,000), with an actual value of 30,456,000,000 rubles (about $15,280,000,000).

"The excess of fulfillment of Piatiletka for the first two years is particularly remarkable in the field of heavy industry. While Piatiletka provides in this field for 12,4[illegible]0,000 rubles, the actual output was 13,764,000,000 rubles.

"The extent to which actual output exceeds estimates may be gauged from the following figures:

"Steel—Estimated at 9,900,000 tons; output, 10,200,000 tons.

"Production of general machinery during the first two years also exceeded the plan.

"Though estimates for the first year of Piatiletka proved exceeded, particularly remarkable successes were achieved by Socialist industry in the second year. In 1929-30 the gross output increased 25 per cent, exceeding Piatiletka estimates by 5 per cent.

"It must be emphasized that the increase in the output of industries producing means of production amounted last year to 40 per cent, exceeding the planned figure for the year, by 16 per cent.

"In the most important industries, the actual output and the Piatiletka estimates compare as follows:

"Oil—Excess over the plan 17.1 per cent.

"Steel—Excess 6.7 per cent.

More Estimates Exceeded.

"The output of the metal working, machine building industries exceeded estimates 26.3 per cent and production in the electrotechnical industry exceeded the Piatiletka estimates 39 per cent.

"In short, in all important industries we are progressing beyond Piatiletka figures.

"A less rapid tempo of growth was recorded in the light industries in which available agricultural and raw materials acted as a limiting factor. The stimulation of native raw materials and resources will enable us, next year, considerably to exceed the Piatiletka estimate in the light industries as well (food, cotton, &c.).

"On the whole, the prewar level of industrial production already has been doubled.

Building Program Far Ahead.

"The building program industries also are far in advance of the Piatiletka figures. The building program industries controlled by the supreme economic council during the last two years amounted to 4,605,000,000 rubles, against 3,990,000,000 rubles provided for under the plan.

"While during the first year the construction program followed, on the whole, Piatiletka estimates, only slightly exceeding them, in the second year—that is, 1929-30—the Piatiletka estimate was sharply exceeded against an estimated 2,331,000,000 rubles, the excess being 27 per cent over Piatiletka.

"Such considerable excess in the program of factory construction insures further acceleration of industrial development, making perfectly achievable the slogan, 'The Five-Year Plan in Four,' and in many important industries fulfillment of the plan in three and a half years (probably coal, machine building, oil, &c.).

Great Advance in Farming.

"Very great advance has been made in the field of agriculture. The sown area increased from 118,000,000 hectares in 1928-29 to 127,700,000 in 1929-30. The areas under cultivation far above Piatiletka estimates were: Sugar, 11.1 per cent; cotton, 23 per cent.

"Improved cultivation of the land, particularly on collective state farms, and the consequent growth of yield resulted, in 1930, in a gross grain crop amounting to 86,500,000 tons, against 71,700,000 in 1929, an increase of 20.6 per cent, while marketable grain produced was 32.6 per cent above Piatiletka provisions. Thus the grain problem has been fundamentally solved.

"Striking successes here are the direct result of the remarkable progress of collectivization and state farm development.

Peasants Join Collectives.

"Taking all peasant households in every line of farming on October 1, 1930, uppwar of a fifth (21.5 per cent) joined the collectives. More than 5,000,000 peasant households rejected individual farming and took up collective farming, realizing in practice the advantages of the new methods of farming.

"This year the collectives planted 36,000,000 hectares, as compared with the 20,600,000 provided for in the fifth year of the Piatiletka.

"The fact that already 49.8 per cent of the peasants have joined on a collective basis in the grain regions (the northern Caucuses, the lower Volga, the middle Volga and the Ukraine) is of decisive importance. If we add the growth of the State grain farms, whose cropped area exceeds 6,000,000 hectares, the socialized sector gains even greater weight.

"Consequently, this year's share of the socialized sector (collective and state forms) of marketable grain produce exceeds 50 per cent, against the 43 per cent planned for the last year of Piatiletka.

Live Stock Socialized.

"Simultaneously, the socialization of live stock made great strides. The percentage of socialized live stock was:

"Working horses—1928, 9 per cent; 1929, 1.8 per cent; 1930, 22.2 per cent.

"Cows—1928, 4 per cent; 1929, 9 per cent; 1930, 7.3 per cent.

"The second year of Piatiletka recorded a particularly sharp advance in the socialization of live stock, which, coupled with the organization of great cattle farms (cows, hogs, sheep, &c.) brings us near solution of the cattle-breeding problem. This problem will be solved by the same methods as the grain problem and in the shortest time (year two).

Holds Policy Is Sound.

"The growth of the collectivization movement has provided splendid confirmation of the soundness of the policy pursued by the Soviet government toward the peasantry.

"Liquidating the kulaks (rich peasants) as a class and basing itself upon collective farmers—this firm foundation of Soviet power in the village—the Soviet government is confidently leading the individual poor and middle peasants toward Socialist forms of agriculture.

Here modernization of agricultural technique plays an immense role. The value of agricultural machinery employed in field work increased from 1,400,000,000 rubles to 17,000,000,000 rubles. The tractor peak reached 1,022,000 horsepower, against the 560,000 provided for under Piatiletka.

Railroad Results Given.

"The powerful growth of industry and agriculture has put great strain upon transport, particularly railways. Under Piatiletka, the railways were expected to carry in the first two years 350,900,000 tons of freight; actually, they carried 409,200,000. Passenger traffic also exceeded Piatiletka estimates, the figures being 51,500,000,000 and 77,100,000,000 passenger-kilometers, respectively.

"Already, during the first year, the railway traffic program was exceeded. However, further development is revealed, particularly in the great advance over Piatiletka estimates in the second year, when railway-loading amounted to 233,500,000 tons, exceeding by more than one-third the previous year and by 25.6 per cent the Piatiletka estimates for the year.

"Passenger traffic shows similar results. During the year 508,500,000 people were carried, the total run amounting to 47,400,000,000 passenger-kilometers, while Piatiletka provides 155,000,000 passengers and 35,400,000,000 passenger-kilometers for the fifth year.

Looking to America.

The Piatiletka estimate for 1929-1930, affecting passenger-kilometers, was exceeded 86.6 per cent. Here in transport, as in industry and the whole national economy, the construction program is actually exceeding the Piatiletka estimates. Doubtless execution of this enlarged construction program will make possible greater participation of Europe and America in this industrial development.

"All these stupendous achievements, which resulted from the greatest activity and enthusiasm of the toiling masses, primarily the working class, has made possible further very appreciable improvement in the material and cultural standards of the toiling population.

"This improvement in the condition of the toilers was reflected primarily in the growth of employment.

Reflected in Labor.

"The total number of employed reached 13,684,000 in 1929-30, against 12,793,000 projected for that year in Piatiletka. As a result, already at the end of the second year, the Piatiletka problem of unemployment has been completely removed from the order of the day as unemployment in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics no longer exists, while Piatiletka foreshadowed 400,000 unemployed at the end of the fifth year.

"At present we are faced with the problem of the speedy reproduction of the skilled labor power need and shortage which was so acutely felt by a speedily industrializing country.

Seven-Hour Day Gaining.

"Improvement in the condition of the toilers was reflected also in a further increase in the number of workers enjoying a seven-hour day. While, at the beginning of the second year of Piatiletka, 19.1 per cent of workers worked seven hours a day, at the end of that year the number of factory workers enjoying the seven-hour day reached 43.5 per cent of the total, exceeding Piatiletka provisions by 3.5 per cent. This insures the introduction of the seven-hour day in the remaining enterprises sooner than was scheduled under Piatiletka.

"This general improvement of the toilers' condition was accompanied by a further rise of wages, which in the last two years increased on an average of 12.1 per cent. Thus the ever-growing development of national economy and the systematic expansion of the Socialist sector of national economy, which already represents a dominating factor in economic life, fully insure realization of the slogan of millions of toilers, 'The five-year plan in four,' leading to systematic advancement of the material and cultural standards of the working class and peasantry from year to year.

Success Predicted.

"Contrary to all the prophecies of hostile economists and politicians, contrary to the wrecking efforts of embittered fragments of the old system, Piatiletka is being carried out and will be fulfilled. It may confidently be said Piatiletka will be fulfilled not in five but in four years.

"The question of the fulfillment of Piatiletka in scheduled time, that is, in five years, no longer is a problem to us, as this task already has been exceeded, as is shown above. The present task consists in the fulfillment of Piatiletka before schedule, that is, in four years. The above figures show we are accomplishing this object.

"However, we are not satisfied by our tempo of progress or quality of work. This explains why we so mercilessly criticize ourselves. Those who, on the basis of this criticism, conclude the failure of Piatiletka only place themselves, as may be seen, in a ridiculous position."

LOVE TANGLE SEEN IN KILLING OF FOUR

Knife's Wielder Infatuated With Girl, Note Found in Vicinity Hints.

ONLY CLEW TO MYSTERY

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Nov. 30 (N.Y. W.N.S.).—The theory that a love tangle was responsible for the Germond murders last Wednesday night, when a country family of four was butchered with a kitchen knife by an unknown assailant for an unknown reason, was given further emphasis today by the finding of what may be a love note by the side of the road which passes the Germond farm.

The note, written in an illiterate hand on a narrow strip of paper, reads as follows: "Don't you remember me? Could I come over and sit by you? Would you care?"

The tentative presumption is that the note was handed to Lernice Germond, the good-looking 18-year-old daughter of the murdered household, while she was riding on the bus which brought her home from Poughkeepsie late Wednesday night, shortly before she was murdered along with her parents and 10-year-old brother.

Perhaps Written on Bus.

The note was written in a jiggled fashion, which may or may not indicate that it was composed on the bus. It was found folded, but not crumpled in the ditch by the roadside, 200 yards beyond the point where the bus driver stopped to let Bernice out.

Dennis Haggerty, driver of the bus, said today that he recalled a dark-skinned man, who got out a block or so before it stopped at the Germond farmhouse.

Sheriff Vernard J. Rockefeller and State troopers, while considering the possibility that the note was placed on the road by an excitement seeker after the murder, do not think any one would be foolish enough to do this in the face of the feeling among the farmers, and are therefore inclined to take it at its face value.

They reason that in a crime as inexplicable as this they are forced to give weight to every possible clew. The massacre of the family as they were busy with the nightly chores is the closest thing to an Edgar Allen Poe mystery that Dutchess County has ever experienced.

Talk About Nothing Else.

The family was extremely well thought of in the community and was well connected. Ralph Butts, former mayor of Poughkeepsie and a cousin of Mrs. Germond, said yesterday that he did not know of any quarrel or feud Germond had ever had which could in any way account for the murders. Paul Germond, brother of the murdered farmer and owner of the prosperous farm a mile down the road, agreed emphatically with Butts, as have all his neighbors.

Catholic Students Will Hold Rally

Mission Gathering Is First of Kind Planned for This Section.

Every Catholic high school, academy, college and preparatory school in the District, as well as Catholic University and Georgetown University—a representation of several thousand pupils—will take part in the first mission rally of its kind to be held in this section Monday afternoon, December 8, at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, it was announced yesterday.

The rally is to be held under the joint auspices of the recently formed Catholic University conference of religious and clerics, and the Washington Conference of the Catholic Students Mission Crusade. The Right Rev. John M. McNamara, Bishop of Washington, will officiate, and the Very Rev. Frank A. Thill, national secretary-treasurer of the Catholic Students Mission Crusade, of Cincinnati, Ohio, will speak on the work the crusaders are doing for home and foreign missions.

An invitation has been extended the public to attend the rally, and an opportunity will be given to inspect the new mosaic recently presented the shrine by Pope Pius XI. The cadets of St. John's College will assist at the pontifical benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

NEW YORK WILL QUIZ POLICY RACKETEERS

BOARD OF TRADE ACTS

New York, Nov. 30 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Activities of policy game racketeers, as they relate to the magistrates' courts of Manhattan and the Bronx, were among the matters that have been looked into by the investigators of the Seabury-Kresel inquiry, it was learned today.

While the assistants of Special Counsel Isidor J. Kresel maintained a discreet silence about their activities in private hearings during their chief's four-day rest in Atlantic City, it was known that at least one policy case had been actively under their scrutiny, in which a half dozen defendants pleaded guilty six months after their case had been dismissed in magistrate's court.

This case was presented last year to the grand jury which investigated the magistrates' courts under District Attorney Crain and which found nothing much wrong with the courts. What may have been discovered in the recent inquiry is a secret rigidly guarded by the investigators.

Arrested in Hotel Raid.

A motel raid in West Sixty-fifth street, in December, 1927, resulted in the arrest of seven men, including the assistant manager of the hotel, and the evidence against them included a pillow case full of policy tickets. All were dismissed by Magistrate Henry M. R. Goodman, who heard the case after an adjournment. The prosecutor in West Side Court at that time was Eugene B. McAuliffe.

Howard Barber and Samuel Marcus, secretary and counsel of the society for the suppression of crime, were so interested in the case that they took it to District Attorney Banton's office. Indictments were obtained from the grand jury, and in May six of the defendants pleaded guilty before Judge Koenig in general sessions, the hotel manager being discharged. Two were fined and four received suspended sentences.

Policy, a lottery game based on daily clearing house returns and long a favorite form of gambling in Harlem, where it is better known as "numbers," has in recent years spread throughout the city, particularly in foreign-born communities, until it has become one of the city's most highly lucrative and competitive rackets, responsible for a large percentage of homicides.

Investigator Returns.

Mr. Kresel returned today and will renew tomorrow his intensive shaping of evidence for presentation in open hearings, which may be resumed about the middle of this week.

The practice of victimizing defenseless women of Harlem in order to bring the arrests of vice squad plainclothes men up to quota, charged in the testimony of "Chile" Acuna, is due for a detailed airing when that former stool pigeon resumes his story. Acuna is understood to have at least a dozen more cases in which he says women were taken to court on trumped-up charges when no evidence at all had been found against them, and during the Thanksgiving interval he has been going over the court records to refresh his memory about the fates of the defendants.

"Debunk the racketeer!" urged the New oYrk Board of Trade today in a statement commending the action of District Attorney Crain in summoning a committee of 50 business and professional men to help him stop the activities of gangs who levy tribute on various industries.

The movies, newspapers and some novels have created in the public mind, the board said, an impression of the racketeer that is all wrong. He is not a powerful, intelligent person, a marvel of bravery, cruelty and determination, but rather a pasty-faced, snivelling crook, easily frightened, but spreading his activities and making money because the public has been taught to fear him.

GERMAN SHIP SAVED FROM BLAZE AT SEA

Fire Extinguished in Time to Protect Boat, Crew and Passengers.

STEAMERS RUSH TO AID

New York, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Fire broke out today aboard the North German Lloyd freighter Ludwigshafen, off Cape Mala, Panama, but was extinguished in time to save the boat, its crew of about 35 men, and a handful of passengers, a Cristobal dispatch said tonight.

The dispatch, which was received by the North German Lloyd officers here, was from the vessel and said:

"Fire broke out at 2 a. m. today. It was under control at 8 a. m. We are proceeding to Cape Mala under our own power. Further particulars tomorrow."

North German Lloyd officials took this dispatch as correcting previous information, based on radio dispatches, that the ship had been abandoned and that the crew had been taken aboard the British freighter Benhorvich, en route to Balboa, Canal Zone.

The Ludwigshafen sent out distress calls at 2:15 a. m. today. Radio advices tonight to San Francisco reported that the salvage steamers Scioto and Manizales had taken the Ludwigshafen in tow and were headed for Balboa.

SMITHSONIAN TO GET GLIDER HAWKS USED

Ceremonials Being Arranged Call for Presentation December 8.

PARTING FLIGHT PLANNED

The glider Texaco Eaglet, in which Capt. Frank M. Hawks was towed from San Diego, Calif., to New York in the first transcontinental glider flight ever made will take a place beside Charles A. Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis in the Smithsonian Institution here next week, C. G. Abbot, its secretary, announced today.

Although final plans for the presentation have not been completed, tentative arrangements call for formal ceremonies December 8. Some time this week the glider will be towed here from New York by airplane and Capt. Hawks will make its final flight in the craft before a delegation from the institution and high Government officials.

This glider is said to have covered more mileage than any other in the world. In approximately 50 flights, totaling 570 hours' duration, it has flown more than 4,000 miles. The transcontinental flight was made between March 30 and April 6 of this year. It was completed in 44 hours and 10 minutes.

A model of the fleet Lockheed monoplane in which Capt. Hawks established his still existing nonstop West-East cross-country records, has already taken a place in the Smithsonian's historic aeronautical collection.

2,800-Mile Radius Plane For Army Is Being Tested

Craft Expected to Be Used by High Officers on Short Notice; Will Be Capable of 225-Mile Speed.

Detroit, Nov. 28 (A.P.).—A high-speed monoplane, of fuel and oil capacity for a 2,800-mile journey, has been built here for the United States Army.

The plane will be delivered to Wright Field, at Dayton, after final tests have been made by the manufacturer, the Detroit Aircraft Corporation.

The plane is an innovation in Army aircraft. It provides a seat for one passenger besides the pilot, and is expected to be capable of a speed of 225 miles an hour, about 35 miles faster than any machines now in use by the Army.

Tanks for 288 gallons of gasoline and 24 gallons of oil occupy most of the cabin space.

It is understood the machine fills an order for an airplane capable of reaching any part of the United States in twelve hours from a central point. The assumption is that the plane is intended for high Army officers whose presence may be required on short notice anywhere in this country or in Panama or Porto Rico.

Marquette Is Offered Harvard Hockey Date

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 30.—Harvard University athletic authorities have invited the Marquette University Hockey Team to Boston, Mass., for a 1931 ice meeting between the Hilltoppers and the Crimson, but no definite steps have been taken toward an Eastern trip this coming season. Marquette defeated Harvard last year.

The Marquette schedule will not be drafted until the Western Conference meeting in Chicago early in December, and intersectional games, if any, will be filled in after that.

Coach John Hancock, who takes over the hockey reins at Marquette this season, already has his squad in training, but there will be little practice on ice until shortly before the Christmas holidays.

LANCASTER JOINS HUNT FOR AVIATRIX

No word has been received of the Australian flier since she left Havana in her reconditioned plane, The Bullet, at 9:11 a. m. Friday.

Capt. W. N. Lancaster, of the British Royal Flying Corps and a former flying partner of Mrs. Keith-Miller, was en route here by plane to assist in the search for her. With him is John Liggett 3d, Pittsburgh, one of the backers of Mrs. Keith-Miller's recent Pittsburgh-Havana flight.

The naval station at Key West said no ships in Gulf or Atlantic waters had reported information of the missing aviatrix, and that orders for a search by Navy boats would have to come from the Navy Department at Washington.

Local flying companies said that no word of Mrs. Keith-Miller was received and that no plans for a continued search were under consideration.

Mr. Keith-Miller was believed by local fliers to have been blown over the Gulf of Mexico by a high wind that swept in from the east.

"Plymouth" Maple Bedroom Set

AUTHENTIC reproductions

The cheery warmth of the nut brown coloring individual to maple makes furniture of this wood as desirable today as it was when the originals of the above reproductions were fashioned by earlier American cabinet makers.

Here, indeed, is a well-done grouping of interesting pieces for a delightfully charming bedroom.

★ "The Committee on Milk Production and Control, of which Mr. H. A. Whittaker is the Chairman, emphasized the fact that the consumption of fluid milk in the United States is too low for proper and economical nutrition. This country is far below the optimum daily consumption of milk for the normal child. Health agencies both official and voluntary should more actively encourage greater use of high quality milk as a nutritional and health protective program. The best information available indicates that approximately one quart of milk is desirable daily for the average growing child; but the average child receives considerably less than this amount."

THE DEMOCRATIC SPLIT.

As Congress assembles it becomes more evident hourly that the Democratic party is so badly torn by internal dissensions that it is unable to take advantage of Republican losses in the elections of November 4.

Disagreements within the Democratic party have already made it impossible for that party to "cooperate" with the administration. The seven prominent Democrats who took it upon themselves to give a pledge of cooperation in behalf of unemployment relief have been repudiated by Democrats in Congress. The object of the seven was to reassure American finance and industry that the Democratic party is safe and sane. Many Democrats in Congress are now preparing to demonstrate that finance and industry can not rely upon this assurance.

Investigations of "Wall street," the Chicago Board of Trade, the cotton exchanges, and other agencies are to be demanded by Democrats at this session. Chairman Raskob's hope of building up the Democratic party as a bulwark of big business and as champion of repeal of the eighteenth amendment is dashed by the opposition of Democratic spokesmen in Congress.

The lack of a national leader contributes to the confusion in Democratic ranks. Upon his arrival in Washington last week Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic leader in the Senate, remarked: "I do not favor the repeal of the eighteenth amendment." Immediately a movement was instigated by the Democratic national committee looking to the displacement of Senator Robinson as Democratic leader. He was criticized by other Democrats for consenting to cooperate with the Republicans for unemployment relief, and for opposing an extra session. Senator Walsh, of Montana, was suggested for the Democratic leadership, because of his modified stand on prohibition, his close relations with the Republican insurgents, and his eagerness for an extra session that would expedite Democratic control of the Senate. Democrats came out in favor of an extra session, and threw cold water upon Senator Robinson's proposal to support Republican plans for unemployment relief.

Wet Democrats in the Senate seem to agree with the Raskob national committee that Senator Robinson must be removed as Senate leader, in order to pave the way for nomination of a wet candidate for President in 1932. They hold that his declaration, "I do not favor repeal of the eighteenth amendment," has sealed his fate so far as nomination for the Presidency is concerned. But the dry Democrats of the Senate are not falling in with the Raskob program. They will not permit Senator Robinson to be deposed as leader if they can prevent it.

Northern Democrats have convinced themselves that the South is so wedded to Democracy that it will accept any Democratic candidate for the Presidency and vote for him, even if he is a wet and responsive to the "big business" elements that control the Democratic national committee. Southern Democrats vigorously assert that the South will not support a wet for President. They believe that the dry South and West will hold the balance of power in the next convention, under the two-thirds rule, and will turn down any man who stands for repeal of the eighteenth amendment. Senator Robinson suits them. If the South can not have its own candidate, it can at least veto the wet choice of the North.

Thus the irreconcilable conflict between wets and drys in the Democratic party is bewildering its councils in Congress and preventing it from taking advantage of Republican misfortunes. There being no national leader among the Democrats, it has been easy for Senator Norris to take over the leadership of the Democrats by showing them how to bedevil the Republicans with insurgent assistance. The intestine quarrel in the Democratic party, however, becomes more intense as the presidential campaign approaches. If the party is to hold together at all it must develop a policy and leadership of its own, instead of remaining the tool of Republican insurgents.

MR. NYE'S GESTURE.

Senator Nye gives notice that he will ask Senator-elect James J. Davis to stand aside today when his credentials are presented, in order that the committee on campaign expenditures may look further into the reports relating to expenditures in the Pennsylvania campaign. Mr. Nye states that additional items have been found which run the combined total expenditures in behalf of the Republican candidates in Pennsylvania to more than $520,000. He adds, however, that most of this expenditure related to the gubernatorial campaign. The assurance is given that the proposed inquiry will not require more than a day or two.

This gesture has all the appearance of a bid for notoriety on the part of Senator Nye. For a brief moment he is to bask in the limelight that floods the opening of a session of Congress.

No doubt Senator-elect Davis will stand aside. It would not be worth while for his colleague, Senator Reed, to enter into a quarrel with Mr. Nye for the sake of having the oath administered on the opening day. That the committee will consume much time in bringing in its report is not to be expected, since there is no charge of excessive expenditures in connection with the Pennsylvania senatorship campaign. Members of the committee ought to be in a position to prevent the chairman from exploiting his place of brief authority at the expense of a senator-elect who is entitled to his seat.

DESTRUCTION BY RATS.

The rat population of the United States is over 100,000,000. The latest information on the rat comes from W. F. Crouch, of the division of predatory animal and rodent control of the Biological Survey. The work of 200,000 people is necessary to feed this predatory creature, he says, and the damage it causes amounts to more than $200,000,000 annually.

Rats are the most destructive of all animal pests. Investigations of the Biological Survey indicate that one rat may destroy as much as $400 worth of merchandise before he is trapped or killed. But what is more serious, rats are the agents which have spread bubonic plague to nearly all parts of the world. In India alone this disease causes approximately 500,000 deaths per year. "What other dangerous and destructive animal," asks the Public Health Service, "could have lived so long in such close proximity to man without having made itself so seriously obnoxious as to excite a wave of resentment leading to speedy extermination?"

A new weapon against the rat, a poison known as "red squill," is considered highly important by the Biological Survey. It can be mixed with bait and is attractive to the pests. So far as is known no other animals are affected by it.

The means of exterminating rats are available. Organized community campaigns have been especially successful. Apparently the chief obstacle in the way of ridding the country of these pests is public apathy.

TRAFFIC RECOMMENDATIONS.

It is not surprising that the traffic reports submitted to the Commissioners by the Traffic Advisory Council and Dr. Miller McClintock, Harvard traffic expert, are at direct variance in certain essential elements. The Traffic Advisory Council is composed of amateurs in so far as traffic matters are concerned. Dr. McClintock is an expert along these lines. The council has more detailed familiarity with the local situation than has Dr. McClintock, but since his is the expert report it bears the weight of greater authority.

The council recommended that traffic control be decentralized, with the police department, a traffic engineer, the license bureaus and other branches of the local government assuming authority over certain aspects of the regulation and control of traffic. Dr. McClintock, however, recommends that a new department, to be known as the department of vehicles and traffic, be created in which would be centralized the regulation and control of traffic, together with the licensing of vehicles and operators and the administration of a financial responsibility law. The office of traffic director was set up a few years ago to avoid the evils of decentralized control. It would be a step backward to parcel out authority over motor vehicles as proposed by the advisory council.

Dr. McClintock suggests that a fixed speed limit should be abolished and that "a reasonable and prudent speed having due regard for the traffic, surface and width of the street, and the hazard at intersections, and any other conditions then existing" be made the basic regulation for the operation of vehicles. This suggestion is in accord with preferred methods in modern traffic control. In a certain Midwest city, it has been found practicable to establish a speed rate of 45 miles an hour, utilizing automatic lights and other devices to slow down vehicles where conditions make high speed hazardous. Motorists drive as fast as they wish, subject, of course, to arrest if, in the opinion of the arresting officer, they are driving at unreasonable or imprudent speed, except where their speed is reduced by traffic lights. This system takes into account the criticism so frequently heard that traffic lights slow up traffic by employing them for that specific purpose alone.

The several reports having to do with traffic reform should be given careful consideration. Unquestionably the present regulations have been outgrown. Local traffic moves sluggishly, and although the local automobile accident and fatality rates are satisfactorily low, there is a demand that the flow of traffic be speeded if it can be done without making the streets more hazardous. When new regulations are enacted, they should be drawn in conformity with the principle that the traffic problem is in constant flux. Traffic regulations should be sufficiently elastic so that they can always be adjusted to meet changing conditions.

REGULATING BILLBOARDS.

The Nation-wide campaign against offensive billboards is gaining steady momentum. Various methods of ridding the landscape of hideous signs and advertising contraptions are being tried out in different States. Public interest in the subject has increased to a point where a successful method in one locality is quickly broadcast throughout the country.

A billboard licensing law will go into effect in New Jersey the first of the year. This is considered one of the most effective means of regulating the outdoor advertising industry and preserving natural scenery. Neighboring States will keep anxious eyes on the operation of this law in New Jersey.

In some sections the advertisers themselves are showing a disposition to respect the tastes of motorists. Resentment against companies which allow their blatant "ads" to blot out the scenery is steadily growing. The Council for Preservation of Natural Beauty in Pennsylvania reports that 6,000 women in that State alone have pledged themselves to discriminate against products advertised on the landscape. Corporations that fail to take note of this resentment run the risk of building up a widespread and permanent prejudice against their products.

It has been suggested that trees be planted in strategic positions along highways to shut out the view of billboards. This might be effective in some cases, but it can hardly be considered a general remedy. Most of the States find it more practical to remove offensive signs from the right of way and to rely upon public opinion and regulatory measures to control billboards on private property.

The most hopeful aspect of the situation seems to be the growing public demand that natural beauty remain free of desecration. If the people make their wishes known, the Legislatures will begin to act against this nuisance and advertisers will find better means of acquainting the public with their goods.

LITTLE AMERICA

From the Boston Transcript.

One year ago today Richard Byrd flew above the South Pole. On November 28, 1930, he publishes the book which tells his own story. Here, in a wealth of new detail and with a strong added force of authority, our people have spread before them the narrative of a human feat unquestionably one of the greatest of all time. "Little America"—the city built upon ice 2,000 miles distant from any other habitation of man, yet equipped with radio towers that withstood every gale of the Antarctic while their daily messages of achievement encircled the world—exists no more. By now, one year from the day when Byrd set out for the pole, every trace of the village may be covered as deep by snow as though immense steam-shovels had labored to give it burial. But Rear Admiral Byrd calls his book "Little America," and in this form it will live through the centuries.

The long sunless winter in a land of snow was followed by an exceptional sunrise—the dawn, perhaps, of a new historical period. As Rear Admiral Byrd wrote after the polar flight, "All told, it has been a fairly good day's work. An airplane has been taken from temperate regions on a long voyage through the tropics, assembled, tested and flown in the polar region without accident. Twelve hundred miles of unknown areas surveyed within a few hours—it would have taken foot travelers weeks to learn the same things. I do not altogether agree with some of the authors who say that aviation can accomplish nothing in the Antarctic. I am more than ever encouraged in my belief that it can accomplish a great deal."

What the Byrd South Pole expedition did, above all, was to set before the world an example of human excellence in achievement—a courage that dared face all obstacles, a capacity of management which knew how to provide, nevertheless, fitting means to overcome each of these obstacles, and a perseverance sufficient to see the task through. Immense odds were thus conquered. And, though there were contentions, conflicts, troubles galore among the men of the party during the long months on the ice, not the life of one may was lost, nor did any individual flinch. Little America shows man's powers of management functioning at their best. As such, to Great America, they are a challenge and a reassurance. If we would resolve to use our own resources to the same full extent that Byrd and his men used theirs, who can doubt that any difficulties which the Nation confronts today, would very soon be swept down, and a better, more generally cheerful efficiency be established than any which our country has yet known?

SHORT CIRCUITS.

Helpful Suggestion No. 978.

Chanute Tribune: One local economist would end the unemployment problem by putting one million men to work straining static out of radio waves.

Luck.

Kansas City Star: Now we hear of a New York capitalist who lost all in the stock market and just when things looked blackest his son got a job as half back.

The Latest.

Buffalo News: The woman around the corner had to send for the plumber. She was washing her midget car under the kitchen tap and it slipped out of her hand and went down the drain.

Cooking Static.

Norton Telegram: A young Norton woman is all upset today. Yesterday she baked a cake from a recipe received over the radio only to discover she had a teaspoonful too much static in the frosting.

No Substitute for the Broom.

St. Paul Pioneer Press: The gas range may have replaced the old-fashioned cook stove and the electric washing machine the washboard and tub, but apparently the vacuum cleaner has not deposed that ancient emblem of cleanliness, the broom. The Census Bureau reports that 37,000,000 of these useful implements were manufactured last year, or one for every woman in the United States over 21 years old.

CANDOR IN LABELS.

English jam manufacturers are engaged in a weighty conference over the proper designations on labels, according to the Boston Transcript, and one decision they have reached is that where two fruits are merged in one jam the predominant fruit in the mixture shall be named first on the jar's label. Thus, a jar indicated as "Plum and Apple" will contain more plum than apple, but when the label reads "Apple and Plum," apple will be the principal ingredient. If the contents contain equal parts of apple and plum neither will have precedence on the label; the names will be bracketed.

The manufacturers point out that this is the most logical plan that could be employed. We say instinctively "bread and butter," "ham and eggs," "waffles and sirup," "liver and onions," giving precedence in our spoken and written speech to the article of greater bulk and of chief importance in the combination. The butter, the sirup, the onions, the eggs are but the garnish to the dish. We feel bound to remark, nevertheless, that there are some glaring exceptions to this rule.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

THE SUM OF THE YEARS.

He lived, loved, laughed and died,
Knew friendships and the trees,
Mountains and rolling seas,
Paved street and country-side;
Spring with its clean-washed green,
Summer with flowers abloom,
Autumn's gay colored scene
And winter's dirge of doom.

Some joys escaped his net,
Some griefs he also missed;
Life runs so long a list
None all it holds can get,
But blent within the care
And all the hurt and woe
Was many a memory fair
That he had smiled to know.

When the long journey ends,
Out of the loss and gain,
A few real joys remain;
Pride, honor, beauty, friends,
Love that has stayed the same
When trial found the door.
What matters wealth or fame?
Life gives to kings no more.

Does Butchery Seem Unimportant Without Cheers and Music?

By ROBERT QUILLEN

AMERICA lost 37,568 men in the great war. That number seems small when compared with the losses of other nations, yet the horror of such needless slaughter made every other public and private interest seem trivial.

Do you remember how it affected the nation?

For the first time in their history the people were united in a common purpose—a determination to win the war quickly, at any cost of effort or treasure, and end the frightful business of butchery.

Money meant nothing. When Dawes was criticized for buying Spanish mules at $400 a head, he answered that he would have paid as much for sheep if sheep could have carried supplies to the front.

Countless millions were spent for artillery, for submarine chasers, for gas masks, for tanks, for steel helmets, for hospital supplies—for anything and everything that would save the lives of men.

When an attack was planned, a bombardment costing millions of dollars cleared the way for the troops. Lives were more precious than money.

The people made no protest. They oversubscribed every issue of bonds. They met every call for money to lessen the suffering of their soldiers. They endured little privations cheerfully. They made sacrifices of time and money without complaint.

"End the slaughter!" they cried. "Whatever the cost, let us end the business quickly."

A nation united, unselfish, glorified, aflame with patriotism, laboring and praying to end a horror that claimed almost thirty-eight thousand lives.

What does it mean? That slaughter does not horrify us unless the slain are in uniform? That our hearts cannot be touched without the aid of martial music and waving flags?

More than thirty thousand are killed in America each year by automobiles. Why is the nation so indifferent to this slaughter? Are the dead less dead than those who died in France?

The horror can be ended if the people can be made to care.

All cars can be equipped with safety glass.

The incompetent and those who deaden their wits with alcohol can be denied license to drive.

The reckless can be jailed.

And every crossing, whether rail or highway, can be made overhead.

Cost money? Of course it will cost money. But was anything said about the cost when billions were spent to stop that other slaughter?

Men who would not cooperate to save the soldiers were called traitors. Some were sent to jail. A few were lynched. Is it a lesser crime to refuse cooperation in the effort to save children and women and men not in uniform?

Various Aspects of Political Issues Discussed by the Press.

Mr. Hoover's Services.

(St. Peter (Minn.) Herald.)

When this hectic era is over, and the public has time to catch its breath, the value of Hoover's guiding genius in relieving depression to the utmost of his ability will be recognized. His conference of business executives no doubt halted wage cutting to a great extent. His action in releasing funds for river and harbor improvements at once, will place many men at work and restore their buying power. His release of $50,000,000 in funds for highway improvements penetrates to the recesses of every State. We can not agree with all of his policies but we must recognize his unflinching progress in trying to stem a tidal wave.

Of course, it is none of our business, but we do think it is about time for Mr. Hoover to appoint a commission to find out what his other commissions are doing.

Power Control a National Issue.

(Chicago Daily News.)

It is probable that Pinchot of Pennsylvania and Roosevelt of New York scored their respective political victories on November 4 not because of their position on the issue of control of public utilities and regulation of power rates but regardless of those positions. Governor-elect Pinchot was supported by influential men of affairs who do not agree with his radical views on the policy properly to be adopted toward public utilities. Gov. Roosevelt's ideas in respect of that problem are moderate and aroused little opposition or interest save among the reactionaries.

It is likely that power, superpower and effective control of public utilities will be emphasized increasingly in American politics. For a vital issue is emerging.

It Gives Them Pause.

(Christian Science Monitor.)

The South and West are practically as dry today as they were in 1928, and the bulk of the Democratic electoral votes comes from the South. LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Suggests That Union Station-Pennsylvania Avenue Boulevard Be Named After Sir Walter Raliegh.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That the proposed boulevard connecting the Union Station Plaza with Pennsylvania avenue should be named after some one of the States not now honored with the name of a street in Washington, is a worthy sentiment. In my judgment, however, the point is not well taken when we survey the whole situation.

That at the time of creation of the Federal City, each of the original States should have been so honored, is beyond dispute. With 48 States now in the Union, and each one the peer of all the others, there would be heartburnings and dissatisfaction should any one State be given the distinguished and unique honor of having the proposed boulevard named after it.

Recently I suggested the name of Benjamin Franklin boulevard as an appropriate name for this new thoroughfare. The name of no other one American, unless it be George Washington, would be so fitting.

The other day I was looking up some facts on the early history of America, and chanced to pick up a short history entitled "Colonial Virginia," J. A. C. Chandler and T. B. Thames, published by the Times-Dispatch Co., Richmond, Va. (1907).

Much of the first chapter was devoted to the part Sir Walter Raleigh had taken in the colonization of what is now the United States. The mere mention of the fact is sufficient to refresh the memory of all of us, and to suggest to the most of us, that here is a man, and an event, and a period of time, that combine all the elements which should be considered in the naming of the new boulevard.

Columbus has been fittingly memorialized in the beautiful fountain in front of the Union Station, "where he holds the world in his hand." And further, this memorial to Columbus, fortunately, will be the "capstone" of this boulevard.

So of the three men who had most to do with the discovery of America, the colonization of America, and the building of the Nation, Raleigh alone is without a fitting memorial in the Capital of the Nation.

I therefore suggest the name of Sir Walter Raleigh boulevard for the new thoroughfare.

GROVER W. AYERS.

As President Is Responsible for All Executive Departments, "Federalist" Thinks His Choice of Helpers Is His Own Affair.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to indorse your editorial of November 29 commending President Hoover for having "taken the liberty of appointing a Secretary of Labor of his own choice instead of choosing an appointee from a list selected for him by the American Federation of Labor."

I have often wondered why editors and other publicists have not thought it necessary to rid us of the idea that secretaries of executive departments, so far as regards their immediate official responsibility, are anything more than confidential clerks to the Chief Executive.

That they should be men of character and great special ability is to be desired and expected, and such shining lights as Jefferson, Hamilton, Webster, Clay, Stanton, Seward, Hay, Root, Knox and Taft, may have been responsible for the popular misconception of their actual place in the governmental household. But there is nothing in the Constitution of the United States to indicate that its framers thought of them otherwise than as well-trained helpers in relieving the President from the drudgery of details incidental to his performance of the great task entrusted to him, not them, by the votes of the people.

The Constitution does not even honor them with the title of "Secretary." Therein they are simply mentioned as "the principal officer in each of the executive departments."

Yet it is probable that, by at least nine out of ten voters, Secretaries of departments are as seriously considered as if they were responsible directly to the people. This may account for the fact that at times there is failure on the part of some to realize that in a sense the President's choice of a Cabinet officer is his own affair and none of their business.

Of course cases may arise in which refusal of the Senate to confirm a Cabinet selection might be wise. But, generally speaking, I think there should be as little interference as possible with the President in the choosing of his administrative help.

FEDERALIST.

"Federalist" Commends President Hoover for His Warning Against Danger of Bureaucracy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to offer a word in praise of President Herbert Hoover for his clear conception of the constitutional relationship of the Federal Government to the States as expressed in his timely statement regarding the war on racketeering. He says:

"Every single State has ample laws that cover such criminality. What is needed is the enforcement of those laws and not more laws. Any suggestion of increasing the Federal criminal laws in general is a reflection on the sovereignty and the stamina of State government."

Reading between the lines of that statement our attention is directed to the greatest danger against which the American system of representative government is destined to contend. If the States, unmindful of their responsibility under the Constitution, lose their stamina in continued civic inactivity, then will follow the dubious experiment in bureaucracy against which the American people have been warned by American statesmen from the beginning.

Jean's Santa Claus

By JULIE ANNE MOORE

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

JEAN MELBA, a small-town girl with big-city ideas, from Kelsey, Conn. She craves adventure and, a little girl at heart, wants Santa Claus to visit her this Christmas. Her small-town Romeo.

PHILLIP BALDWIN, hears the wish and promises to appear on Christmas with a marriage license. Spurning the line of least resistance by marrying him immediately, Jean decides to tackle New York and find a job there. Jean plans to live with

MOLLIE WILDER, a sophisticated friend, but upon arriving in the city learns that Mollie has married and left town. The situation is saved by

SANDY CLAUSE, a handsome, polished and enigmatical young man who not only protects her from a stranger's advances, but since she has lost her traveling bag, arranges for her to spend the night at the apartment of

MARCIA WHITE, whose quasi-hospitality does not blind Jean to the fact that Marcia's apartment is no haven of safety. Sandy leaves, but Jean's fears are indorsed by the sudden appearance of two sinister men,

SLIM DIGGERS and

FARGESON, the latter of whom is seen to violently embrace Marcia. Jean flees the apartment and, while leaving, observes Sandy returning. The next day he gets her a job with the I. P. P. Jean learns that Fargeson was murdered the night before in Marcia's apartment, and Sandy tells her he did not return, although she is sure she saw him. The I. P. P. is the Institute of Practical Philanthropy, which Sandy manages. It aims to fulfill the wish of an eccentric but benevolent millionaire to encourage motherhood ideals among little girls by giving them Christmas dolls, to be known as miniature babies. Jean learns that Mollie's marriage did not last long; her husband deserted her, so the two girls live together. In the meantime Sandy goes to Boston on business. Lionel Gilman, his assistant, makes love to Jean, and during the course of her new work she discovers little ELLEN, the daughter of Fargeson, the man who was murdered.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER XIII.

December 1.

Twenty working days to Christmas * * * and I begin to wonder * * * Mollie and I spent a quiet Sunday * * * Talked our heads off * * * In the afternoon we climbed to the top of a bus and rode out by Riverside Drive * * * I could almost see the window of Marcia's apartment * * * I'm afraid I'm not very brave. * * * I keep thinking about Marcia's detective and Slim Diggers and wondering if anything is going to happen to me * * * I could get out of New York, of course, but * * * the longer I stay, the more reasons there are for not leaving * * * I couldn't let Sandy down on the miniature baby plan for one thing. * * * And then, there's Lionel * * * He really seems to be so hopelessly in love with me * * * If I could only be sure of myself * * * I like him ever so much * * * But liking isn't love as Phil would tell me, and I can't be sure * * * All day yesterday I was thinking of Lionel * * * He might at least have run by to say hello * * * Poor little Ellen * * * She's such a sweet child, and pretty as a picture * * * I can hardly believe Fargeson was her father, but Miss Wood is sure of it * * * She said Fargeson * * * or Sampson as she knew him * * * had been very wealthy, but the claims against his estate would amount to twice as much * * * Ellen won't get a penny * * * I suppose it's just as well considering how Fargeson got his money * * * But the child has to live, and poor Miss Wood is barely making enough to pay their rent * * * What kind of woman is Ellen's mother that she can abandon her child that way? * * * Miss Wood says she comes once in every few months to see Ellen, but is always in a hurry and never gives her anything * * * Miss Wood thinks it would be better if she didn't come at all * * * She must be a demon * * *

Jean had dressed and was making coffee over the gas plate Sunday morning, when Mollie groaned lazily, indulged in a series of strenuous yawns, and finally sat up, pulling a pillow behind her back.

"Drop another teaspoonful of coffee in that pot, honey," she told Jean sleepily. "There's a fresh loaf of bread and a little butter in that package under the table. We might have a little toast."

Jean smiled acknowledgement of this suggestion and bent over the table. "There's coffee enough * * * Is this the package?"

"Yes." Molly took a cigarette from the tray by her bed and poked about for a match. "Will you let me have a match, darling? The maid service around this place is just too bad."

Jean held a match to her cigarette, and went back to attend to her simple breakfast.

"What a day!" said Mollie, gazing longingly out the sunlit window. "Before the crash, I used to be out on the broad highways this time Sunday morning, making 60 miles or better. The boy had a nice bus if he didn't have good sense."

Jean was slicing bread for toast. But now she put the knife down and sat on the bed, facing Mollie. "Why do you talk about him like that, Mollie? He must have had good sense or you would never have married him."

"He didn't have any more sense than I did. It was just one of those crazy three-week flirtations. We both realized we were in love and we figured the best thing to do would be to get married. I called up several of the girls at the store and at 3 o'clock in the morning we were on our way out of the State. At 8 we were back in New York and telling the girls we were headed for his home in Missouri."

"Falsely, as I happen to know," Jean smiled, passing Mollie a cup of black coffee. "One of your friends at the store said you had married a wealthy young man and that you were going to his home in Missouri for your honeymoon."

"We thought it would be fun to pretend to go away and not," said Mollie. "His parents really do live in Moberly, Mo., so that's where we said we were going. Instead, we went to a hotel and laid out a program of shows and little trips. But * * * by 4 o'clock it was all over."

"Why * * * what happened * * *?"

Mollie set her empty cup on the smoking stand, and slid down under the covers once more, her hands folded under her head. "I don't know, honey * * * I told you I was half mad. It just came over me in a moment that I shouldn't have gotten married * * * and I blamed him for it * * * I left him * * * flat!"

Suddenly Mollie rolled over and buried her face in the pillow. "I * * * I'm sleepy," she said in a muffled voice. "Call me in time for work tomorrow * * *"

Jean did not reply, and what she knew to be a little sob, she told herself was Mollie's peculiar little laugh.

Monday morning Jean arranged a temporary desk with the little table that had held their glass plate and labored over the work she had brought home from the office.

Lionel ran by shortly after twelve, ostensibly to give her a report of work on the Miniature Baby Plan, though Jean knew very little could have happened since Saturday.

He came into the room, smiling boyishly, and stood with his back to the door. Jean watched him curiously.

"Is this the sort of reception I get?" he demanded, trying to scowl. He reached out for her hand and pulled her to him slowly. "Can't you say you're glad to see me, and * * * kiss me?"

Jean held back, uncertainly. The smile went from his lips, and a strange, hurt look came into his eyes. Jean saw it and like a little girl kissing an adult, she reached up and pecked him on the cheek.

He pulled her to him roughly, and put a firm hand under her chin. "That was better than nothing," he conceded, "but * * *" She closed her eyes and held her breath. His lips were pressed to hers until they hurt. She tried to push him away, but the strength seemed to have gone out of her. She could hear the pounding of her own heart.

"That," he said, releasing her at last, "is the way it ought to be done. * * *"

She stepped back from him, slowly, a little frightened, and yet knowing in her heart that she did not resent what he had done.

The few minutes that he was there, she tried to appear at ease, but the turmoil he had stirred up within her continued, and when he had gone she threw herself on the bed and cried. Not because she wanted to cry, but because she had not given into him. Surely, she told herself with a little groan * * * surely, this is love.

He did not stay long. He had to hurry back to the office, he told her, to meet a client.

"Aren't you lonely, living here alone?" he asked her presently.

"But I don't live alone," she assured him. "Mollie Wilder and I live here together. At least, she used to be Mollie Wilder. She's married, but she's not living with her husband. * * * I want you to meet her some time."

The fact that she had a roommate was obviously a surprise to him. But after a moment he said, "Mollie Wilder? It's a pretty name, isn't it. You * * * both occupy this one room?"

Jean grinned. Did he think they had a suite of rooms? She told him, laughing, "Of course not. The very idea! This is Mollie's room. I work in it because it's big and airy. My bedroom is in back."

He took her so seriously that she hadn't the courage to explain, but when he had gone she wondered what would happen if he ever went to the next room down the hall and asked for her.

* * * * * * * * *

Mollie came in at 6:30 greatly excited. "I'm going to the Crescent," she announced gayly. "And with a big, handsome boy from the wide open spaces."

Jean had been busy at her improvised desk, but now she sat on the bed and watched casually while the feverish business of dressing went on.

Mollie's voice flowed, musically, happily. Name's Waterman * * * Swell looker, honey * * * Met him in the store. * * * Fast worker, too * * * Had me dated up in no time. * * * Seemed to take it for granted he could make me, the conceited thing. * * * Wanted, to come for me, too * * * Imagine coming for me here. * * * Wish you were going, darling. * * * You're working too hard. * * * What you need * * * And on, and on, and on. When at last she had gone Jean thought she could still hear her voice in the room.

Jean had supper where she had taken lunch, at a little restaurant around the corner. Back in the room, she returned to her desk and worked feverishly. Hours later she got up and washed her face to revive her energy and hold off the weariness that had come over her.

But it was no use. Her eyelids sagged. There was no choice but to go to bed.

Whether it was the darkness or the loneliness, she did not know, but when she turned the light out and crawled under the covers, her mind promptly filled up with disagreeable thoughts.

Marcia * * * Slim Diggers * * * Fargeson * * * Perhaps Marcia was even now trying to find her, to ferret her out of her hiding place and * * *

The memory of the detective at the office sent a cold chill through her. And Diggers had had the audacity to go to the office and ask for her. What would he have done had she been in? What would he do now if * * *

The thin, unwholesome face of Slim Diggers grew to gigantic proportions, glared at her * * * and faded into nothingness as her brain sank into a deep slumber.

Jean awoke with a start. It was still night. The room was dark. She threw a hand out quickly; but Mollie was not by her. And yet she could have taken an oath that she had heard some one in the room.

She waited, hardly daring to breathe. The room was as still as death.

She told herself that she had been mistaken, chided herself for a coward and a bundle of nerves. Slowly she sank back until her head was on the pillow once more * * *

Instantly every nerve in her body was taut. Something warm had brushed against her cheek * * *

Hollywood Screen Life

By HUBBARD KEAVY.

Hollywood.—The possibility of "The Merchant of Venice" as a starring picture for George Arliss has been considered, but not very seriously perhaps, because Shakespeare's record in the movies hasn't been anything to jump up and down and clap hands about.

GEORGE ARLISS

The producers probably feel that the play would be very arty and all that, but pretty much of a waste of time so far as the box office is concerned.

A check-up by this department's Shakespearean expert discloses that at least nine of the bard's plays have been made into movies since 1916—and none of them were outstanding financially.

There has been a different explanation for the semifailure of each, but generally it is said that the average moviegoer considers Shakespeare over his head—and so selects less literate entertainment.

It seems that Arliss has a wide enough following among film theater patrons to warrant his playing Shylock. He is one of the few artists who is worth while seeing in whatever type of character he chooses to depict.

Arliss' Shylock is a different person than Shakespeare wrote him. His Shylock is a compassionate old fellow, with whom, I am told, one is in complete sympathy.

Four in Year.

Four films adapted from Shakespeare's plays made their appearance in 1916. Two were productions of "Romeo and Juliet," the others were "King Lear" and "Macbeth."

Since then there have been "Midsummer Night's Dream," "Othello," "The Tempest" and "The Taming of the Shrew."

Not So Good.

The last named, despite the additional attraction of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks as the tamer and nagger, respectively, did not attract a sufficient number of paying patrons to be classed as a success.

The Fairbanks probably would have been far better off, financially and otherwise, if they had made two pictures that suited the character of each rather than one that fitted neither.

The record, as I have said, credits Shakespeare with nine plays—but have his ideas been lifted? Dunt esk, it's embarrassing.

YOUR NAME WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

By HARRY A DEFERRARI, Ph. D.

THE family name "MacBride" is of Celtic origin. Its original Irish form is "Mac Giolla Bhrighde," which means "the son of the servant of St. Brigid." "Brigid" (modern English "Bridget") is of Celtic origin and means "strength." "MacBride" has been especially common in the northern part of Ireland.

The family name "Seaton" (also spelled "Seton" and "Sayton") is of English origin. Its source is the old English "sae-tun," which generally means "the farm or estate by the lake," although in a few cases it means "the farm or estate by the sea." It belongs to that very large group of family names which indicate the place of residence of the persons who were first so called. There are several villages called Seton in England. Those in the counties of Cumberland, Devon, Durham, Ruthland, Yorks and Northumberland have given rise to family names. A certain Richard de Seton and an Elena de Seton are mentioned in the Hundred Rolls.

The family name "Smedley" is of English origin. Its source is the Anglo-Saxon "smethe-leah," which means "the smooth lea," and which indicates an original place of residence. Many families which bear this name have received it because of a former residence in Smedley, Lancashire. A certain Willelmus de Smythlay and a Magota de Smythlay are mentioned in a fourteenth century list of English names.

The family name "Daubert" is of German origin. It is the modern form of the original "Dawipert." "Dawipert" was an old personal name, meaning "bright custom" or "famous custom."

Guiding Your Child

By MRS. AGNES LYNE.

Biography.

All children at about the age of 12 or 13 begin to take an interest in the lives of great men.

Exceptionally intelligent children show this interest somewhat earlier and with them it is apt to be a particularly intense and absorbing one.

This leaning, which children, and especially gifted ones, show toward biography should give the parent who bemoans the fact that his child does not seem to be finding much intellectual food on the dry bones of curricular studies a clue to at least one way of enriching his child's experience.

The reading of biography meets in a fairly unique way the child's need for wish fulfillment reading and for knowledge about the real world both in the past and in the present.

Reading about great men and women at this age, when hero worship is natural, helps the child to formulate an ideal which for the time being at least serves to center his constant strivings toward an ideal self.

Incidentally, it gives him a wide knowledge of history, science and literature, a knowledge which, acquired as it is with a glow of emotional interest, is likely to become a permanent part of his intellectual equipment.

Parents who are wondering what sort of books to give their older children for Christmas may find in carefully selected biographies at least a part of the answer to the question.

Of course the life stories of great persons must be chosen with reference to their interest to the particular child.

The biography which is most likely to appeal is one in which the child finds a vicarious fulfillment of his own hopes and dreams or at least a story of achievement not too far removed from them.

CONSTIPATION.

DR. S. BOROS makes use of the following method of treating constipation. About half an hour before breakfast the person takes two tablespoonfuls of milk sugar dissolved in a half glass of water. At 10 in the morning he eats a half pound, or thereabouts, of grapes, or about an equivalent of prunes, dates or other fruit sugar foods. At 4 in the afternoon there is a repetition of the grapes or other fruits. At 10 at night, or somewhere thereabouts, the morning helping of milk sugar is repeated. It takes two or three days of this regimen to become effective. During this time small enemas can be used if they are needed.

There are several kinds of milk sugar. Presumably, it makes no difference which is used. In all probability, the same amount of milk sugar eaten on berries, fruit or cereal would be equally effective. A glass of water on arising acts as a laxative, and the addition of some milk sugar to this water will not make it less pleasing, and it will add to its effectiveness.

The theory is that fermentation tends to overcome the tendency to constipation. The diet recommended is one that lends itself readily to fermentation. The sugars are foods and their calories must be taken into account. If the person concerned tends to be stout he should lessen his intake of bread and potatoes to offset the sugars. If he is a diabetic he may need to find some other cure for his constipation. Certainly no diabetic should add that amount of milk sugar and fruit sugar to his diet without the advice of his physician and dietitian.

What Today Means to You

"SAGITTARIUS"

IF DECEMBER 1 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:50 a. m. to 11 a. m., from 2 p. m. to 3 p. m. and from 10 p. m. to 11:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 7 a. m. to 9 a. m. and from 5 p. m. to 7 p. m.

Unexpected and suprising events will be ground out of the mills of destiny on this date. The astrological influences will be energising and affairs will be attacked with vim and vigor. The fruits of effort will be disappointing.

The child born on this December 1 will have a sunny disposition, and a vivid personality, and it will charm its way through this world. It will be an indifferent student, but will have an alert mind and an observant eye.

Your nature is not an unlikable or unlovable one, but procrastination and irresolution have made your character a non-dependable one. You become so used to putting things off, and are so inclined to think life is a prolonged picnic, that when confronted with something which demands orderly, concise thinking, and punctual, efficient action, you are not ready to deliver the goods. Your good intentions are poor substitutes for neglected duties. The world soon tires of hearing "I am going to," when it is listening for "I have."

You are usually in a good humor, although your indifference to your own responsibilities does not promote good humor in those about you. You are not enough of a genius to be forgiven for your temperamental eccentricities. You have considerable individuality, and originality is displayed in your work. Nature gave you a six-cylinder mind, the value of which you have not appreciated, and the power of which you have never exhibited.

You are never happy with your superiors, as you yourself, wish to be "it." You must, to be happy, be the speaker and not the audience. A vivid imagination and a tendency to romance makes you an interesting entertainer. You are not an unconvincing talker, although for the sake of color, you do not always stick to facts. Your life will never run along a level plane.

Neuritis!

There is no pain like neuritis. There is nothing quite so torturing—so utterly unbearable as Neuritis. It robs life of all joy—and makes people desperate. But Neuritis is not hopeless—it responds to proper treatment. A well-known physician has written us, "Have been drinking Mountain Valley Water for six weeks for Neuritis and am feeling better than I have for two years." Mountain Valley Mineral Water from Hot Springs, Arkansas, brings relief in Neuritis because it gets at the root of the trouble—it tends to neutralize the acids which are irritating the nerves and retards the further accumulation of these acids by aiding healthy, normal elimination through the kidneys. FOOD PRICES TODAY AND A YEAR AGO

What consumers save over last year's costs

A&P is advertising prices of foods today compared with prices a year ago. The differences in the lists generally show substantial reductions.

The idea is to bring home to the housewife how much less her food is costing her than it cost last year at this time. In these figures she sees actual facts, not theories. To her they have a high practical news value.

They are important in another way. They illustrate in dollars and cents A&P's policy—the policy of passing on to the consumer the savings that come from lower food prices.

By A&P's new low prices customers can measure the decline in the cost of raw materials that enter into what they eat.

BUSINESS IS NEARING CONVALESCENCE, FISHER DECLARES

World Prices Are Seen As Scraping at Bottom

New Purchasing Power Was Released on a Lower Retail Level—Credit and Installment Sales Losses Slight—Upward Turn Expected Soon.

By IRVING FISHER,
Professor of Economics, Yale University.
Special to The Washington Post.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 30.—When will business turn upward? The index of consumption of electrical power—and American industry is three-quarters electrified—shows a seasonal upward trend, but not so much as the normal trend during the past five years. The Financial Analysis Service Business Index shows business far below normal throughout 1930 with the lowest ebb in August, whereas the low point comes normally in July. From August to October business increased at the normal rate, but the depression continued unabated relative to a five-year average. Since October, however, the decline has been much steeper than normal. Employment conditions have continued unfavorable. Payrolls declined more than seasonally between September and October. October building was off by 10 per cent from September building, where normally an increase of about 5 per cent might be expected. The monthly index of the Federal Bureau of Labor reported a fall of 2 per cent in the wholesale price level during October, after three months of stability.

Lord d'Abernon recently predicted a period of "nonpayments and bankruptcies throughout the world" unless—and unless is a vital word—measure shall be taken to stop the fall in commodity prices. France holds nearly two billion dollars in gold, and the United States four and one-half billion. World economic conditions are such as to pile up nearly two-thirds of the world's monetary gold in these two countries. No individuals or groups of individuals are to blame. The culprits are a bad economic organization and antiquated and inelastic monetary systems. Most other countries are left with insufficient gold to carry on business at stable price levels.

Accumulation Hinders Business.

The huge accumulations of gold in France and the United States hinder business in these two countries as well as other countries. French trade fell by nearly $400,000,000 during the first ten months of 1930. Exchanges of goods between nations have fallen off alarmingly. Naturally, there has been an abrupt decline in new financing done by both domestic and foreign corporations. A corporate total of bonds, notes and stock issues which reached a high record of over 10¼ billions for the first ten months of 1929 has shrunk to $5,600,000,000 in 1930.

Those who regard these disheartening facts as a threat of still worse to come forget the experiences of past depressions. They agree with J. H. Thomas, member of Britain's Labor cabinet, who dolefully tells America that "never in your experience are you going through the hell you will in the next four months."

Doubtless to many this will be the winter of our discontent, and to all of us it is as gloomy as the darkness that precedes dawn. The United States, as well as most other countries, has experienced some sixteen months of depression. But the discerning ones will note that past depressions have seldom lasted longer, and most depressions have made the return toward prosperity in briefer time. A note of cheer is the report of the United States Department of Commerce in its first national survey of retail credits, that all through this depression the Nation has paid its bills.

Payments Kept Up.

Notwithstanding that open-credit and installment commitments of the American people amount to $20,000,000,000 annually, the average loss from bad debts has been only 6 per cent. It was a common prediction of those who questioned the wisdom of extended retail installment purchasing that the first real test of depression would see a breakdown of that system, with purchasers unable to keep up their payments on motor cars, radio sets, washing machines and other household appliances. But this Nation-wide check on credits shows that while people have been buying between $4,000,000,000 and $5,000,000,000 worth of installment goods for the year and some $15,000,000,000 worth of goods on open-credit, the average loss from bad debts on installment sales has been only 1.2 per cent, and on open credit sales of department stores only 0.4 per cent. The purchasing power of the people, with a steady, if diminished flow into wages and salaries, has sufficed to keep up these payments on a higher deferred price level than that which now obtains in retail trade.

By this time installment purchasers in the United States have completed the twelve-month cycle of payments on the old high level of prices. Purchasing power of the American people has been seriously impaired—how seriously nobody knows. The maintenance of wage rates can not, of course, maintain the earnings of workers who have no jobs or only half a job. Lower prices, further extension of credits, and the speeding up of public and private building programs, however, should soon restore lost buying power and lost prosperity. Clothing has worn out, deferred repairs on dwellings and plants must now be attended to, and the increase of population calls for much new construction. Depletion of inventories and the wearing out of durable goods coincide with the reduction of retail prices to stimulate demand for all kinds of goods. Demand for goods is increased by lower prices, more money for the mortgage market, and more money and credit for commercial loans. Moreover, the level of commodity prices has given symptoms of stabilizing, indicating that many are beginning to buy to fill out their lines of goods. Bottom is apparently already being scraped.

Observable Abroad, Too.

This condition is observable not only at home but abroad. Leonard P. Ayres, who has studied carefully the tendencies of foreign price levels, reports that the very low prices of Hungary and Egypt have definitely advanced; that the German decline has flattened out, and that recently the Japanese price level appears to have begun to move sideways. Similar reports from a few more countries during the remainder of this year will, Mr. Ayres thinks, justify us in believing that the bottom both of the price decline and of the depression has been reached.

Wall street, apparently, believes this, but, as yet, faith is feeble. One would expect the bottom to be reached in the stock market prior to the upturn in commodity markets. Since the middle of November this seems to have been the case. Stock prices have gained consistently and the recessions due to profit-taking and further liquidation have been less severe. There is no longer overextension of brokers' loans—on the contrary, the brokers' loan level has declined by nearly 70 per cent since October 2, 1929, to the lowest point since May 27, 1925.

The Department of Commerce figures show a rise in foreign trade during October. The steel trade expects a spurt in building. The farm board has to its credit the averting of a serious panic in the wheat market, although its attempts at stabilization of grain levels have been based on false economic theory and may yet lead to trouble from surpluses held off the market. The temporary measures of the steel and metal industries to restrict production seem justified in the circumstances and should be beneficial, and it is to be hoped that the Government and Congress will permit them to continue this program until the slump is over.

Meanwhile the economic and financial leaders of the world are gathering in parleys like that of the council called in Paris this week by the International Chamber of Commerce and the conferences of central bank heads which are arranging gigantic international credits and a better distribution of gold reserve. These major measures should help to end the depression and to assure renewed prosperity.

STOCKS LOSE HALF OF RECENT GAINS

LONDON, PARIS STEADY

By E. W. DIEFENDORF
(Irving Fisher Service).

Stocks on the New York Stock Exchange last week struggled to hold their price levels at the preceding week's average, but bad news and profit taking broke through in the closing session to bring the index of all-industrials to 101.6, the low since November 12. A net decline last week of 4.5 per cent brought the total loss from the November high to equal 5 per cent, or over half of the amount gained in the recent rally. In this rally the price level had risen by 9 per cent from 97.2, on November 10 to 106.4 on November 21.

The group indexes in general moved in line with the index of the market, the preferred group being the only one to record a rise last week.

The radio and theater group again was the heavy loser, closing last week with a decline of 10 per cent. The entire list of stocks in this group was weak, with Loew's, Fox Film A, Paramount Publix, Warner Bros. and Radio Corporation leading in the falls.

The electrical equipment group, off by 7.7 per cent, broke on sharp falls in Westinghouse Electric and General Electric.

Weakness in Case and International Harvester brought the farm machinery group off by 7 per cent last week. Auto Accessories closed last week off by 7 per cent, with Electric Auto-Lite, Timkin Roller Bearing, Bendix Aviation, Goodyear Tire and U. S. Rubber leading the falls.

The building supplies, chemicals, coppers, household goods and motors were off by 6 per cent; rails by 5 per cent; oils, steels and utilities by 4 per cent; tobaccos and miscellaneous stocks by 3 per cent, and stores and office equipment by 2 per cent.

Stock Values Traded Decline.

The decline in stock prices on the New York Stock Exchange last week was more a result of the lack of public buying than of profit taking. This is indicated by a drop of 19 per cent in the average daily values of tradings in all-stocks to $85,100,000, the low since the week ended August 5. It shows an increase over this year's low of only 11 per cent. The tradings in common industrial stocks dropped by 17 per cent to $65,900,000, a point but 15 per cent above the year's low.

The stores, railroads, auto accessories, household products and machinery groups, and no more, showed increased turnover last week. For the groups of utilities, steels, radio and amusement, electrical equipment, coppers and motors, values traded dropped by from $1,500,000 to $6,100,000 each.

Stocks on the London and Paris markets held their ground last week, declining by less than 1 per cent each, in the face of a sharp break in Berlin. The turnover on the three leading foreign exchanges was small in the absence of public investing.

The level in London at last week's close was 92.7, showing a gain of 2.5 per cent over the October 17 low, while Paris stocks held at 97.8, to show a gain of 2.8 per cent over their November 7 low of 95.6.

The situation in Berlin was less favorable, as the index dropped by 5.9 per cent to the year's low of 60.3.

Speculatives Make Best Record.

The movement of the graded industrial group indexes during the past three weeks shows that the New York Stock Exchange has failed in the recent rally to favor investment securities to any extent. The speculative group of stocks has led in all the movements, closing last week with a net loss of 7.3 per cent, following the sharp rise of 7.7 per cent the preceding week.

Semiinvestment stocks closed last week with a loss of 3.8 per cent from the preceding week's close, while investment stocks were off by 5.0 per cent.

Each of the three graded groups at last week's close had suffered a loss of approximately half of the gains made between November 10 and 24. Investment stocks in the recent rally recorded a gain of 9 per cent over the month's low, semiinvestment stocks a gain of 10 per cent, and speculative stocks a gain of 15 per cent. From November 21 to last week's close investment and speculative stocks dropped by 5 and 7 per cent, respectively. Semiinvestment stocks have dropped by 4 per cent since their November 24 high of 82.5.

COMMODITY PRICE DECLINE IS LESS

FOREIGN LEVELS OFF

The Irving Fisher wholesale commodity price index dropped by 0.25 per cent last week to a new low of 80.6 (1926 equals 100). Despite the new low, last week's loss really indicated a slight improvement, when it is compared with the 1.7 per cent downward break of a week before. Another favorable indication in the wholesale commodity market was the fact that, of the items that changed in price last week, 52 per cent were rises, compared with 21 per cent the preceding week.

The market was decidedly specialized. Sharp breaks in the prices of pork and ham sufficed to cause the level of the all-commodities index to decline.

The purchasing power of the dollar topped the preceding week's high by 0.24 per cent, thus making the wholesale dollar now worth 24.1 cents more than the 1926 dollar.

Foreign Price Levels Off.

Whether or not foreign commodity markets react directly to conditions in the American markets, the wholesale commodity price levels in England, France and Germany broke last week in the sharpest movement since the first of November, following a similar trend in american wholesale prices a week ago.

The English and French wholesale commodity price indexes dropped by 0.97 per cent and 0.26 per cent respectively, with new lows being recorded in each case. Berlin commodity prices dropped by 0.88 per cent to substantiate the preceding week's fall of 0.33 per cent and to indicate definite weakness following a period of rising price levels.

Groups Show Weak Spots.

The character of last week's commodity market is indicated by no change in the price levels of raw and semimanufactured goods, accompanied by a drop of 0.48 per cent in finished goods. In the first two groups definite strength was found in grains, beef, silk, linseed oil and sugar. Small declines in cotton, hides, zinc, tin and cottonseed oil counterbalanced the rises. The finished goods prive level broke on sharp drops in price in butter, pork and ham. Flour and lard rose in price last week.

The agricultural index dropped by 1.52 per cent, while farm products were up by 0.37 per cent, and foodstuffs off by 1.16 per cent. The non-agricultural price level was steady, with the hides and leathers group off by 0.79 per cent, fuel off by 0.14 per cent, metal products off by 0.11 per cent, chemicals steady, textiles up by 0.28 per cent, building materials up by 0.24 per cent, and miscellaneous commodities up by 0.30 per cent.

The weakness in agricultural products brought the purchasing power of farm products off by 1.53 per cent to 96.5, or 3.5 cents below the 1926 average level.

BOND PRICE LEVEL IS HOLDING STEADY

U. S. Government Issues Make Year's High in Spotty Market.

INDUSTRIALS ARE STRONG

(Irving Fisher Service.)

The price level of bonds on the New York Stock Exchange held steady last week, showing a slight inclination to lower levels, as indicated by a net change over the week of less than minus 0.2 per cent. This drop in the all-bonds index brought the level at last week's close to 100.24, a point, 0.2 per cent above the recent low of 100.04 on November 13. The average daily value of tradings in bonds on the Stock Exchange held steady at $8,400,000, showing a gain of less than 1 per cent over the preceding week.

The bond market was spotty, with four groups taking losses of from 0.03 per cent to 1.42 per cent and two groups, U. S. Government and industrial bonds making slight gains. U. S. Government bonds recorded a gain of 0.10 per cent last week, reaching the year's high of 101.91 on November 26; they had shown marked strength in price during the past four weeks, in the face of the general weakness in bond prices.

Industrial bonds were the strongest factor in last week's bond market, closing the week with a gain of 0.27 per cent over the preceding week's close, and 0.74 per cent above the year's low of 97.0 on November 13.

Railroad bonds were largely responsible for the decline in the all-bonds index. Second grade rails continue to show lack of stability and broke to 96.3 the low since 1925, with a loss of 1.42 per cent. First grade rails failed to hold the rising trend of the preceding week and dropped to 103.5, the low since August 1, showing a loss of 0.35 per cent last week.

Foreign government and public utility bonds were steady last week, closing the week with losses of but 0.03 per cent and 0.14 per cent, respectively.

Articles in Use Are Often Complementary

Prices of different articles that are complementary to each other almost always move away from each other. A knife and a fork, a horse and a cart, a cup and a saucer, a "hook" and an "eye." (What would a "hook" be without an "eye"?)

If horses became plentiful and therefore cheap, this would bring about the more extensive use of carts. The demand for the latter would increase their price, even as the horses became cheaper.

More People, Speedier Money, Economists Say

The more densely populated a locality the more rapid will be the velocity of circulation, because there will be readier access to people from whom money is received or to whom it is paid.

A lady who has a city house and a country house states that in the country she keeps money in her purse for weeks, whereas in the city she keeps it but a few days.

BRUENING WILL PUT PROGRAM IN EFFECT

CABINET READY TO ACT

Berlin, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—The Bruening cabinet tonight busied itself with putting into final form emergency decrees whereby the financial reform program—for months a burning question in German politics—will be declared law by virtue of the extraordinary powers in Article XLVIII of the constitution.

Chancellor Bruening yesterday gave up hope of obtaining passage of his drastic financial housecleaning measures by regular parliamentary means, and indicated that he would arbitrarily approve them himself under the semidictatorial powers granted under Article LXVIII.

Democrats Deny Support.

He made this decision after the Social Democrats served notice they could not support him. At the same time they gave the government to understand they would not join the Communists, Nationalists and Fascists in voting for annulment of the program if it has already been declared law by the time the Reichstag meets again December 3.

In other words, the Social Democrats indicated they were unwilling to take responsibility for a program which cuts civil service salaries and stops government contributions to various forms of social service doles, but were equally unwilling to be responsible for forcing Bruening into an out-and-out dictatorship.

The cabinet's labors tonight were devoted particularly to revamping certain measures which in their original form might be held tantamount to amending the constitution and therefore of questionable legality if decreed under Article XLVIII.

Two Decrees to Be Issued.

Two decrees will be issued. The first, which is expected to be made public tomorrow, will consist of a number of minor modifications of the emergency laws of last July.

The second decree will embody the cabinet's economic and financial program proper and will be published Monday night or Tuesday.

It then will be for the Reichstag meeting Wednesday to accept a fait accompli or—which isn't possible without Social Democratic support—take the responsibility of annulling the decrees and thus throw the whole situation back where it was before the September elections.

Paris Tomb Is Robbed Of $3,000 in Jewelry

Paris, Nov. 30 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—French police discovered this morning that the tomb of Mme. Honorine, in Vaucresson Cemetery, had been tampered with and that $3,000 worth of jewelry buried with the body two years ago had been removed.

Violation of the sepulcher and the theft had been made easier by the fact that the grave and coffin were opened in the presence of magistrates a few days ago at the request of the deceased's relatives. They had voiced suspicion that the woman's sweetheart, who was also her heir, had failed to obey her expressed wish that her jewels be buried with her. The jewels were found intact at the time, but the tomb had not been resealed.

Passengers and Crew Of Seaplane Rescued

Rome, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Passengers and crew of the French seaplane Paiyz, which landed on the ocean near the Island of Monte Cristo yesterday afternoon, were rescued today and taken to the island. The plane was forced down by motor trouble, and ships from Leghorn went to her assistance.

RED CROSS AID ON WAY

Lutie, Okla., Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Fatalities from yesterday's explosion at a mine of the Hailey-Ola Coal Co. here had increased to fifteen tonight with the deaths of two injured men in a hospital at Hartshorne.

Thirteen were killed outright, Lon Swindley died late last night and Burl Boyd this morning.

Louis Pate and Louis McMahan, the only others injured, were reported to be recovering. Thirty-eight men, working in other parts of the mine than in the entry where the explosion occurred, escaped unharmed.

One Injured, One Held After Fight at Station

Meeting at the Union Station yesterday, two New York colored men who had followed the same woman here, engaged in an altercation which placed one in Casualty Hospital and the other in the Sixth Precinct police station.

Charges of assault with a dangerous weapon were booked against Julian B. Thomas, 28, who is said to have slashed his rival across the face. The injured man gave his name as Soloman Ward, 27 years old.

His Honor, Waxing Lyrical, Weds Couple, If Satirical

Reminds Them of Stern Code to Heed, If They Would Happy Be Indeed, Then Ties Knot With Uncourtly Speed.

Aurora, Ill., Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Justice Galvin turned to verse to bind a couple for better or worse.

Spurning prosy legal forms today, a couple heard the justice say:

"Do you this lady for your wife take, to pay her bills and praise her steak? To honor and love and keep her well from the marriage hour to the funeral bell? Cherish her well, in sickness or health, to share in poverty or in wealth? Walk the floor when the baby comes? Buy it rattles, bottles, drums? Love her well enough for this?—Take the lady with a kiss."

The bridegroom—"I do."

The justice—"Now, sweet lady, do you say you will promise to obey? Love your husband, honor him, for his sake risk life and limb? Never look at other men, pledge yourself to him; and then, faithful for the rest of life, be his gentle, loving wife?"

The bride—"I do."

The justice—"Then, by the law of Illinois, you two are wed; may all be joy, the justice you I give, you're wed, the while you both shall live."

In this manner, the justice said, David Livsey and Faye Sutcliffe wed.

They were married November 30, 1905, by the late Rev. E. W. Bagby. Mr. Holcer is assistant superintendent of the Home Beneficial Insurance Co., and is active in Masonic work. Both he and his wife, Mrs Viola Holcer, are natives of Washington.

Wife Tries to Get Einstein New Coat

Frau Attempts to Give His Measurement to Clerk; He Wouldn't Come.

Berlin, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Albert Einstein, accompanied by Frau Einstein, his secretary and a scientific assistant, left tonight for Antwerp, where the party will embark on the steamer Belgenland for a visit to the United States.

One of the last problems to be settled was the acquisition of a new raincoat for the father of the theory of relativity. Finding her husband more than busy, Frau Einstein entered a men's clothing shop and attempted to give a description of her husband's measurements.

"Would it not be more practical," said the salesman, "to have the herr professor come here so we can give him an exact fit?"

The reply left him flabbergasted.

"If you knew how hard it was even to persuade my husband he needed a new coat," the wife answered, "you wouldn't expect me to fetch him here. I wish you had my worries."

A NEW FORD BODY TYPE OF DISTINCTIVE BEAUTY

TODAY, a new Ford body type of distinctive beauty is on display by Ford dealers in this city and throughout the United States. It is called the Victoria and is distinguished by many features of design, comfort and convenience. It marks a new degree of value in a low-price car.

The striking lines of the Ford Victoria are especially apparent in the graceful sweep of the straighter, lower top, the slanting windshield and the curving bustle back, with the spare wheel set at a conforming angle. There is a suggestion of continental design also in the shape and size of the side windows and the intimate four-passenger seating arrangement.

As you open the door and step within the car you will be impressed by the dignity and richness of its appointments. Many details of finish reflect the mode and manner of a custom-built automobile.

The ample, deeply cushioned seats are carefully tailored and upholstered in luxurious mohair or fashionable Bedford cord, optional with the purchaser. Both of the individual front seats have form-fitting backs and fold forward. The rear seat is low and comfortable, with side arm rests that contribute to easy riding. Satin-finish hardware gives a quiet touch of brightness.

Another appreciated feature of the new Ford Victoria is a choice of attractive body colors in rich pyroxylin lacquer. They complement its fresh new lines and contour and help to give it distinctive place on every highway.

See this beautiful new car today at the showrooms of the nearest Ford dealer and arrange for a road demonstration. You will find much to admire in its safety, comfort, and alert, capable performance.

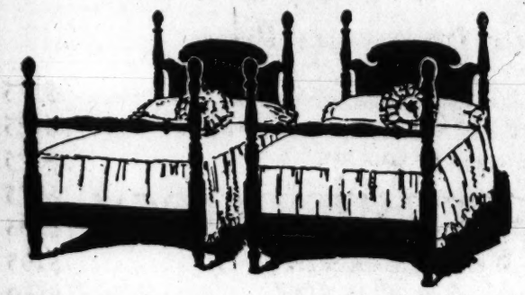
TWIN BEDS



$10.95 Mahogany and Walnut

Amazed are shoppers at the low price of these charming mahogany and walnut beds. We are selling them at about the cost of cheap metal ones.

They have solved the Christmas present problem for one canny father. He bought "the twins"—one for daughter's room—the other for son's.

A thrifty woman who has always been secretly ashamed of her guest room's furniture bought these beds on sight.

Mattresses Made New at a Cost of $4 to $9

Once we locomoted in the family surry or buggy. Smelly gas burners lit our home. We had only the sewing circle to amuse us. We slept on mattresses that soon became uncomfortable and stayed that way.

Today we have motor cars—electric lights—beauty shops—talkies—radios and our mattresses can constantly have their youth renewed.

At a cost of $4 to $9 we make a new mattress of your old one.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

Chosen Few Receive Bids To Cotillon

Baltimore Event Tonight Is Apex of Season for Lucky "Buds."

FEW and far between are the out-of-town debutantes who are honored by invitations to the Bachelors Cotillion in Baltimore. No other ball is of as much interest as the first cotillion of the season which is to be given this evening in the charming old Southern city at the Lyric.

The lucky Washington belles, who with their maids and chaperone are already in Baltimore preparing for the evening, include only Miss Lee Washington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Lee Washington, who with her cousin, Miss Mary Ball Perine, of Baltimore, made her bow to Washington Saturday afternoon, and this evening will be the guest of honor with Miss Perine at a dinner given by the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Corbin Perine, preceding the cotillon. The cousins make a very pretty pair, both tall and slender; Miss Washington, dark-eyed and dark-haired, and Miss Perine very blonde, but with the same dark eyes. Also, Miss Sally Harrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fairfax Harrison, will be presented to Baltimore society this evening. Miss Margaret Peyton Calvert and her sister, Miss Eleanor Calvert, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. George Henry Calvert, jr., under the chaperonage of their cousin, Mrs. Clarence Cottman, will attend the Baltimore cotillon as any debutante bearing the old Maryland name, Calvert, might hope to do.

Miss Sylvia Contee Meredith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Payne Meredith, is also among the chosen few, and will be with Dr. and Mrs. Warren Buckler, who will entertain for her at dinner this evening.

Not only is the cotillon the event par excellence to which the debutantes look forward from the time they go to their first dancing class until they are introduced at this assemblage, but it is the yearly rendezvous of general society of all ages, all sets and all temperaments mingle, where the dowagers criticize the debutantes and the debutantes flaunt their youth before the lorgnons of the dowagers; where the jeunesse doree disports itself with modern abandon, while middle age looks on with charitable but none the less real envy—in short, where all the brilliance and glamour of society are seen as in few other ballrooms.

Cotillon Considered Unique In Many Respects.

The Bachelors' Cotillon is unique in many respects. The cotillon has not been danced here at any other ball for many years. This year the first figure, which will be the grand chain, will be danced only by debutantes and their partners, and as there is a very large number of these young women, the figure will be quite full.

Another most unusual feature is that the same families will be represented this year that for generations have been going to these balls, and debutantes will appear whose grandmothers, great-grandmothers and even great-great-grandmothers danced at these germans, as they were called, many years ago.

There is now no other organization of the kind in America save two—the Philadelphia Assembly and the St. Cecelia balls of Charleston, S. C.—that ranks with the Bachelors' Cotillon, that has its background, its traditions, its age or its lure. Since its organization over 200 years ago it has maintained its dignity, its exclusion and its gayety.

Dr. James W. Inches, noted African explorer, will give an illustrated lecture under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary of St. John's Church this evening at 8:30 o'clock in the ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel, having selected for his subject "From Cape to Cairo." A number of young girls will act as ushers and will include Miss Janet Ball, Miss Florence Mariatt, Miss Constance Tyler, Miss Susie Walker, Miss Sarah Worthington, Miss Mary Metzgar and Miss Margot Wyeth.

By ROBERT D. HEINL

HAVING secured a pair of pasteboards for Amos 'n' Andy for the Army-Notre Dame game, Frank M. (Scoop) Russell, NBC vice president in Washington, received a wire from them which read:

"Please mail the tickets to Chicago if possible will mail check."

Knowing that their restaurant business hasn't been good, and having paid $16 for the tickets, there was a question in Russell's mind as to what the telegram meant. He was inclined to separate the sentence to read: "Please mail the tickets to Chicago," and then add, "If possible, will mail check."

An example of how the chains are fudging up on broadcasting spot news is the putting on the air of a condensed version of the President's message to Congress tomorrow at the same time it is being read to members of the House and Senate.

CARDINAL HAYES will say a word in behalf of the unemployed tomorrow night (WRC, 8:15 p. m.).

Mrs. Margaret Mahorner, contralto, daughter of D. J. Callahan, after having been off the air for several years, will again be heard Wednesday afternoon (WRC, 2 p. m.). She will be accompanied by George F. Ross.

A new composer comes forward tomorrow night in the person of William H. Woodin, president of the American Car & Foundry Co. His compositions include "Gypsy Valse," "In Seville," "Tartar Dance," "Souvenir de Montmarte" and "Gypsy Love Song" (WJZ, 8:30 p. m.).

Mail received from the radio audience during the third week of November, 1930, is exactly double the amount received during the same week of the previous year, records of one of the big chains show.

VISITORS are quite usual at Station WRC, though they mostly come early in the evening or the daytime. It was unusual, therefore, to have a party of four drop in along about 11:30 o'clock the other night to look around.

It was even more unusual when a gentleman in the party, spying the control box, proceeded to play with the switches, throwing the station off the air.

William Abernethy, on duty at the time, caught him before any real damage was done, the program having been interrupted for only a few moments.

The Westinghouse Pioneers, a new feature, will make their debut at 10 o'clock tomorrow night (WJZ, WBAL).

RICHARD B. HARRISON, principal in "The Green Pastures," under the auspices of the New York Tuberculosis and Health Association, will discuss "The Life of Keats" (WMAL, 4 p. m. tomorrow). On December 9, Miss Frances Starr, actress, will talk on "The Life of Elizabeth Barrett Browning." Both Keats and Mrs. Browning were sufferers from tuberculosis.

Through a device employing radio tubes, if a yeggman tampering with a lock on a bank safe, obstructs an invisible light beam, he may automatically send in an alarm to police headquarters.

There seemed to be no kick at the Commission in granting the request of station KICK, of Red Oak, Iowa, to move its studio.

ON last week's Brevities:

Eugene Howard: "I hear interest is waning in California."

Willie Howard: "It never wanes in California."

Homer Rodeheaver, who for twenty years was the tireless song leader and trombone soloist for Billy Sunday, will inaugurate a seres of bi-weekly broadcasts Wednesday evening, (WRC, 8 p. m.).

Dare INTERPRETS the MODE

Green leather forms this unusual tailleur, with its smart short jacket, its self-incrustations, and its air of chic readiness for the hunt. (Courtesy of Hermes, Paris.)

New York, Nov. 30.

COMES a little note from one of our fashion information sources saying that velvet has been chosen to costume the new musical comedy called "Smiles."

Whereupon we remember all sorts of things about velvet, and let out a yell from our cracked throat box for black mammy Judah (who takes the place of the French-maid-who-is-Spanish in New York) to hang a couple of black velvet dresses up on the shower curtain rod in the bathroom, turn the hot water on slowly in the bathtub, go out and close the door. A half an hour and twenty-nine gallons of water later, we open the bathroom door and believe-it-or-not-or-if-you-don't-try-it - yourself, every single solitary wrinkle was out of the black velvet gown I had sat in and on for three hours at the opera the evening before. Better than that, almost every deep-set wrinkle was out of the black velvet and gold lace dress that was cooped up in no uncertain manner for the last three months in a storage trunk. And those that were not quite out disappeared with a little self-rubbing, meaning rubbing the velvet against the velvet with two hands.

Thus I can understand how a musical comedy can afford to use velvet for costumes. Thus I can afford to have a few more myself! Actually a velvet dress is easier to keep the wrinkles out of than any other dress, because hanging it on the shower curtainrod is easier than rigging up the ironing board and pressing.

As to style, velvet will always be elegant, and for this winter and spring it will be both elegant and stylish. What with the ease with which one can keep it in shape added to this, it seems to me that all good Dare-ettes should now go in for velvet in a big way.

Are you tired of parchment lamp shades, brass candle sticks, and porcelain bonbonnieres? So am I! So is just about everybody you know, too. So I have just discovered a way to make them, and other things, too—a radiator cover for instance—of crystal beads. Honestly, crystal beads used in these ways are indescribably lovely. If you will send your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare department of The Washington Post right away, we will send you leaflet telling how to make them all. These things cost a tremendous amount of money if they are bought all made, and they can be made for a fraction of the cost—and look exactly like the originals, you know.

Diana garbed for the hunt was never more fascinating than Miladi Moderne! Because the lovely Diana never had a Hermes model of green leather for a hunting suit, let alone an incrusted one with a nifty jacket and collar and cuff effect as I have illustrated for you today.

If you want to know where her gun is, why somebody is carrying it for her, silly! And as to shoes, this time she preferred stout oxfords and woolen stockings, because it wasn't going to be a very strenuous sort of a hunt, if you see what I mean.

Short fur tuxedos or capes worn over velvet dresses are the afternoon elegance of the moment everywhere in the world where it is not cold enough to necessitate a long fur coat. They are very often of breitschwanz, and when worn with a straight pile velvet dress trimmed with real lace and velvet bonnets, the effect is very Parisienne and chic.

Then there's Dare's weekly fashion letter which you should look for in each Sunday's Washington Post.

Au revoir!

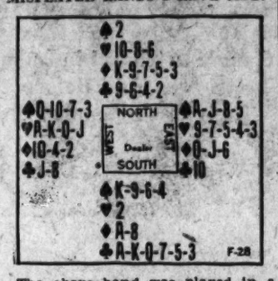
MISPLAYED HANDS I HAVE MET.



The above hand was played in a game of Contract Bridge; score 60-60, both sides vulnerable. South bid two Clubs, West (an optimist) bid two Hearts, North three Clubs, and East three Hearts. South, having been assisted by North, bid four Clubs; and East in turn four Hearts. South could have made five Clubs, but he did not bid that high; and neither North nor South had the type of hand to justify a double, so four Hearts became the contract.

South was using the artificial two-Club bid, but under that system a two-Club bid with a score of 60 shows a normal six-trick Club hand and does not have the artificial meaning of wishing to give partner a choice between two declarations.

At Auction Bridge the bidding probably would have been the same.

In the play, with West the Declarer and Hearts the trump, North led the Deuce of Spades; East played a small Spade and South won with the King. A Spade was returned which North ruffed and led a Club, South won and led a third Spade; North ruffed a second time. As dummy would ruff if a Club were led again, North tried a small Diamond. South won and led a fourth Spade, and North made a third ruff. North then led the King of Diamonds which was followed by a small Diamond which South ruffed. That ended the circus, with North and South looping the loop for eight tricks; and East and West doing a high dive into a five-trick set and a loss of 900.

Where was the error?

THE CORRECT PLAY.

East defended his play of a small Spade from dummy on the first trick by contending that in order to make his declaration (ten tricks) it was necessary for him to win four Spades and five Hearts. He must lose two Diamonds and one Club, so the only way he could make four Spades was to play small from dummy on the first Spade trick and find the King of Spades in the North hand. This reasoning was sound as far as it went; but South having bid Clubs and been helped by North, North's lead of the Deuce of Spades was clearly a singleton. Dummy should have played the Ace of Spades and declarer would have been set for only one trick—he could not escape that.

GOOD NEWS, BRIDGERS.

We are pleased to announce we can now renew the offer of Milton C. Work's great Contract and Auction booklet entitled the PLAYING PROBLEMS. Bridgers who received copies from previous offers are most enthusiastic over it.

PLAYING PROBLEMS presents eighteen hands, the complete auction and contract bidding for each hand with reasons for each bid, the answers to every question and the reason for each answer in complete detail.

PLAYING PROBLEMS, which will be of much greater value to the auction and contract player than many high-priced textbooks, is not for sale. It has been prepared exclusively for readers of The Washington Post by special arrangement with Mr. Work. One copy will be mailed to you upon request if you send self-addressed, stamped return envelope, together with 6 cents in stamps to defray part of the cost of printing and handling this 48-page booklet. Requests not complying with these conditions will be ignored. Address Milton C. Work, care Washington Post.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

UNCLE SAM'S HOME HINTS.

The Teeth.

(Children's Bureau, Department of Labor.)

The development of the teeth begins at least six months before birth. It is probable that a nutritious diet for the prospective mother lays the foundation for healthy teeth in the baby and that lack of proper food for the mother may deprive both her own and the baby's teeth of some part of their normal vigor. Every child has two sets of teeth. The first teeth known as the deciduous or "milk" teeth are replaced, beginning at about the sixth year with the permanent or second teeth. Nearly all so-called teething troubles belong to the first period, as a disturbance is rarely connected with the coming of the second set.

At birth each tiny tooth of both sets lies partly embedded in a cavity in the jawbone, surrounded with and covered by the softer tissues of the gums. As the baby grows, the teeth grow also, and if the baby is healthy they are ready to cut through the gums, beginning at about the seventh month of life.

Teething is a normal process and should not be accompanied by any upset. Many children, however, do show a slight disturbance at this time and a doctor should be called to determine that it is no other condition which is causing the trouble.

Lower Jaw.

First incisor, 6 to 9 months.
Second incisor, 12 to 15 months.
Canine or stomach teeth, 18 to 24 months.
First molar, 12 to 15 months.
Second molar, 24 to 30 months.

Upper Jaw.

First incisor, 8 to 12 months.
Second incisor, 8 to 12 months.
Canine or eye, 18 to 24 months.

Second molar, 24 to 30 months.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

COLLEGE OR MARRIAGE?

DEAR Frances McDonald: I am a college girl in my first year and I am engaged to be married. The decision as to whether I should finish my four years of studying or marry him now I have not been able to make. I am 19 years old, and a settled, sensible girl. I feel that if I marry now I could aid my husband. He is a pharmacist, and not only would his having a home help his peace of mind, but I can help him in the store. I am dissatisfied here, and can not apply myself to my studies nor mingle with the flippant, light-headed students here.

Can you help me to decide as to whether to finish my education or get married? CARA.

Cara, all the higher education enthusiasts will be upon our heads, but I believe you and thousands of other girls would do well to forget all about college and go in for marriage. This befuddled nation is turning out so-called college graduates by the thousand ton each half year. And what they are going to do and why seems to be the last thing any one, least of all the graduates themselves, has thought of. Not more than one-half of 1 per cent of all college graduates can write a legible, intelligently worded letter or carry on a sustained conversation of half an hour. The average mentality does not rate extended education, or profit thereby.

Let it not be thought that this is an argument for turning marraige over to morons. It is not. The morons always have and always will marry early, and often without exhortation or encouragement. The people with whom this article concerns itself, are the girls who are not morons at all; but who feel like morons in a college lecture room. They do not belong in a college lecture room, but in a cheery bungalow planning the baby's lunch and daddy's dinner. There they would shine and know success. At college they develop a well-defined grievance against the world. You have met and selected your mate. Married to him, you will both get somewhere. Putting in four years at hard labor in the name of higher education will destroy you as a person, and probably as a wife. Marry now. You were not meant for the far reaches, and just between ourselves, neither were the giddy-headed classmates who bore you so. You are all putting in time that might be better spent hanging curtains. Best of luck.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

GAS, ENEMY OF HOUSE PLANTS.

ONE of the greatest enemies of plants growing in the house, especially the modern house, is coal or furnace gas. An otherwise imperceptible trace of it in the air will cause the leaves to fall from such plants as the Jerusalem cherry or fuchsia.

Illuminating gas is almost as troublesome as coal gas. The slightest trace of it will retard the growth of new leaves on all but plants with foliage of toughest texture, like palms, rubbers or Sansevierias. All thin-leaved plants, like geraniums, heliotropes, begonias, coleus and impatience sultanas, succumb quickly.

Of course, these plants do not necessarily die, but they become dejected, sorry-looking specimens which do not add to the charm of their surroundings. One symptom of poisoning by gas is that the growth is stunted and the flower buds wither before they are entirely open—in fact they fall off just as the color begins to show. In midwinter owners are apt to mistake this condition for slight freezing. You can usually distinguish between the effects of frost and the effects of gas. When plants are frostbitten the foliage is very much discolored; when affected by gas there is no discoloration.

The only sure way to avoid the bad effects of gas is to see that you have a good chimney draft and that your dampers are properly regulated. All rooms where there are growing plants should be thoroughly ventilated three times a day. This can be done by using modern window ventilators, which are constantly kept open, or by opening the windows in an adjoining room quite wide for five minutes thre times each day. With such care plants will never be troubled with gas, nor will they suffer from lack of fresh air.

Dust is sometimes as deadly an enemy to a collection of house plants as is gas. While we can not prevent a certain amount of dust from settling on the foliage of our plants and stopping up the pores through which the plants breathe, we can remove the dust by constantly spraying them with cold water. All owners will do well to make it a routine treatment to spray their house plants once each week. Plants so treated will have glossy, green foliage at all times.

Don't Blame the Begonia

If it is losing its glossy leaves and producing few flowers. For a tropical plant, it does pretty well, don't you think?

But if you would like to have a healthy, blossom-laden plant, why not write for a leaflet on begonias which has proved very helpful to numerous readers? Be sure to inclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope when you write to

BULGARIA HELPED BY BORIS' WEDDING

Turbulent State in Balkans Now Linked With Italy and Fascist Power.

SERB MENACE LESSENED

Sofia, Bulgaria, Nov. 30 (N.Y.W.S.).—Despite denials in Italy and his country, King Boris' marrying Princess Giovanna of Italy has had a deep political reaction. And everybody in the Balkan states knows it, consciously, or by instinctive racial feelings.

To start with, every Bulgarian peasant, which means the overwhelming majority of Boris' subjects, comments on the match with: "Now we shall have Italy to help us stand up against the Serbs." By Serbs, he means the Jugoslavs, neighbors who are his hereditary foes.

Bulgars fear the Serbs and know that Italy, or at any rate Fascist Italy, is the Serbs' only possible enemy just now. And in the Balkans, where hate is hatred and feuds die hard, this means a great deal. The pretty, shy, modest and gentle queen from sunny Italy has been welcomed here as a reminder to the Serb that Bulgaria now has powerful friends.

Has Another Reaction.

There is another reaction. Her coming as the future mother of the heir apparent has helped the Bulgars to throw off their inferiority complex. They have been afflicted with that distressing complaint ever since the World War. Drawn into it, and on the losing side, by King Ferdinand, whom they punished with dethronement and exile to his native German Coburg, they have been chafing against the stigma of being classed among the "former enemy" states. Hard times only aggravated the trouble.

And it is balm to their proud, sore natures that Boris has wed a daughter of one of the biggest reigning houses. They even forgive her being a Roman Catholic. And that is saying volumes.

Until the very last moment, they were afraid the religious question would ruin the match. Negotiations went on between Sofia, Rome and the Vatican City state for fully two years. Once they broke down altogether because the Pope refused a dispensation.

Still Veiled in Mystery.

There is still a veil of mystery over this knotty point. Just what did happen to make the marriage acceptable to the Holy See is not generally known, even in this compact state of under 4,000,000 souls, where most royal secrets remain secrets for a very short time. No Bulgar will permit a yet unborn heir apparent to be a Roman Catholic.

Ferdinand, expert shuffler and intriguer though he was, found that out to his cost. And his son, Boris, knows perfectly well that his dynasty would end the moment he tried to ignore that clause of the constitution which provides that the heir to the throne must be baptized and reared a member of the Bulgarian Orthodox Church.

Whatever may be the king's political sympathies, M. Liaptcheff, the premier, and his fellow ministers, have other things to consider.

Ready to Lend More.

France has leant Bulgaria money; is ready to lend more. Italy is at best an uncertain Balkan factor, whose policy is liable to change if anything happens to Mussolini.

France is for peace, and so is Britain. And France will see that proper guarantees of peaceful policy are given before making loans. Bulgaria can not afford to be arrogant toward neighbors or help Mussolini pull his chestnuts out of the fire.

So there is every reason to believe the Bulgarian cabinet will continue to go to Paris and London for advice when relations with Jugoslavia get strained, as very often happens. The fact Italy is only too ready to give support at such moments is not likely to make Premier Liaptcheff and his colleagues change their policy now there is an Italian queen consort at the funny little yellow palace. And the opposition is frankly anti-Italian.

Bad Harvests Experienced.

For Giovanna, or Joanna, as the Bulgars call her, has come home to a war-worn, impoverished land. Bad harvests and a mistaken credit policy have followed a long spell of farming depression which destiny added to. Bulgaria simply can not afford to the burden of war losses.

quarrel with friend or foe. And it needs besides such a stabilizing factor as a continued dynasty becomes in these backward Balkan States, where so few are fitted for an active part in government. And so Joanna's coming is all to the good, and the Bulgars know it.

Voters Vote Building, But Deny It Ground

Airmont, N. Y., Nov. 30 (A.P.).—It begins to look as if the Airmont school might have to take its new four-room annex and hang it out the window.

Voters of the district yesterday authorized a $137,000 appropriation for the structure, but at the same time defeated an appropriation of $30,000 for ground to build it on.

Prince Shows Film He Took to Veterans

London, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—The Prince of Wales today assumed the role of film impressario. In Lambeth road in South London he exhibited his own movie of African adventures before 700 former service men.

"It is entirely an amateur effort," the prince told them. "Some of the captions are rather short, but that's not my fault. You don't look at them as you do at ordinary cinema and then turn away and talk to your friend and then look back at the caption," he went on in explanation. "Your motto is deeds, not words."

The prince expressed the hope that he spectators would "get some of the enjoyment at seeing the pictures which II got by taking them."

SIAM PROGRESSIVE, ENVOY SAYS ON RADIO

KING COMING IN SPRING

Facts about Siam that few Americans know were revealed in a radio talk yesterday afternoon by Prince Amoradat Kridakara, Siamese Minister, over the Columbia Broadcasting System. The talk was of special interest in view of the announced visit to this country next spring of King Prajadhipok, Queen Rambhiparaniya and her parents, Prince and Princess Svasti.

Siam, Prince Kridakara made it plain, is more than a land of white elephants, beautiful cats and indivisible twins. On the contrary, it has all the appurtenances of civilization. Another reason why Americans appear to believe the country is uncivilized is that it always has been an unlimited monarchy, Prince Kridakara observed.

Replying to this criticism, Prince Kridakara said the real test is how far Siam has gone under its government. The stability of the country is reflected in the fact that the present dynasty has ruled without opposition for 150 years, he emphasized.

The speaker told how the father of the present king, King Chulalongkorn, rid Siam of its primitive customs and substituted modern improvements.

Prince Kridakara said Siam is indebted to America for the welcome extended Siamese students in American schools and colleges and for the work carried on by the Rockefeller Foundation in Siam in the field of public health and medical education.

Prince Kridakara was introduced by Stanley K. Hornbeck, chief of the Division of Far Eastern Affairs of the State Department.

4-H Club Convention To Hear Hoover on Air

Chicago, Nov. 30 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—A ten-minute address by President Hoover, carried from coast to coast over the radio networks of the National Broadcasting Co., will be the feature of the annual convention of the 4-H Club farm boys and girls which opens here at 8 p. m. tomorrow.

Nearly 2,000 members of the club will hear the words spoken into a microphone installed in the President's study in the White House. Thomas E. Wilson, chairman of the national committee on 4-H Club work, will introduce President Hoover from Chicago and will himself deliver a speech following the President's remarks.

Credit Men See Factors of Cheer

New York, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Well-sustained collections somewhat stimulated retail buying and vigorous efforts to meet the unemployment problem by both public and private agencies, are cited as favorable factors in the December bulletin of the National Association of Credit Men.

Although stating that the general business indices are not cheering, Dr. Stephen I. Miller, executive manager of the association, pointed out today that some phases of the present situation are distinctly favorable. The apparent stabilization in the price of copper he mentioned as having particular significance, inasmuch as copper led the decline in commodity prices.

"It is to be hoped that copper, having put its house in order, will help to lead the other commodities back to safer ground," Dr. Miller said. "Collections continue on a fairly satisfactory basis. Retail buying appears to have taken a spurt in many markets. Money is cheap and plentiful."

Accompanies your Purchase Of First Mortgage Real Estate Notes—Secured by WASHINGTON PROPERTY

NATURALLY, the Government does not sign nor indorse the notes but through the centralization of government activity in the Capital City, the value and safety of first mortgage real estate notes, honestly negotiated and secured by Washington property, is assured.

The prosperity of any city depends upon its industries, and Washington is the headquarters for the biggest business in the world—the Government of the United States of America. The investment in the machinery of government—the various properties necessary to the conduct of the business—runs into the hundreds of millions of dollars, and tens of millions are being added regularly. This business has a monthly payroll in the city of more than $10,000,000, with every probability that the amount will constantly be increased.

No other city on the globe has such a certain, stabilizing influence as this, and conversely, the only thing that can conceivably stop the growth and development of Washington is the complete disintegration of the national system of government.

Since such an eventuality would be outside the realm of even remote possibility, could there be anything more fundamentally safe than investments based upon real estate values in Washington and its environs?

As a holder of first mortgage real estate notes you will not share in any appreciation of value, but you will have the certainty and ease of mind, provided by the factors indicated in the preceding paragraphs, that you will receive the interest on your investment and your principal when it is due.

As in all business transactions, your selection of such notes should be guided by the counsel of honest, competent men who know values, and whose reputation for integrity is dearer to them than any profit could possibly be . . . Fortunately, the men and concerns deserving of your entire confidence are in the majority in, Washington.

AUTOMOBILE SHOW OPENS IN NEW YORK

Prices of Models Displayed Range Between $5,000 and $50,000.

MODERN ART APPEARS

New York, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—The twenty-sixth annual automobile salon, at which the luxurious handicraft of master motor car coach makers is exhibited, opened tonight at the Hotel Commodore. The prices of models displayed ranged from $5,000 to $25,000, with the top moving as high as $50,000 for those who might care for inlaid gold designs.

The effort of the carrossiers this year seems to have been to appeal to the eye and taste for luxury of those able to afford these specially designed coaches.

Narrow front-corner pillars, which eliminate the "blind spot" in driving, are found on most of the "jobs" exhibited. Visorless sloping fronts are numerous. Stationary setting of the windshield glass, though still rare, is increasing.

Large trunks appear definitely to have arrived. More sweeping tails and "designed rears" are also in evidence. Many convertible bodies are being exhibited this year, convertible coupes predominating.

Modern art motifs which have been used in the interior for several years are beginning to find application to the exterior treatments. This is observable in the numerous bright metal effects and in the use of simple contours depending on light and shade for decoration and omitting the stereotyped moldings.

Interiors of the town cars remain conservative for the most part, but numerous novelties are embodied in owner-driven and sport models.

GAYETY

"Hello" Jake Fields, with "Sugar Babies," is at the Gayety this week. Flo Devere, a former "Parasian Flapper," appears to be about the sweetest in Fields' cast. Her two specialties brought out some talented work, and her "abbreviated" costumes, although chilly for this weather, initiated some novelty designs. "Hello" Fields retains the same humor which has gained him an abundance of favorites among burlesque fans. With Babe Abbott singing and dancing herself to applause, Fields, in his comic drama, Flo's snappy work, and some pretty sixteen chorus girls, "Sugar Babies" is good enough for any of Jimmy Lake's fans this week.

"We invade a new field with vastly improved cars at the lowest prices in our history"

BY WILLIAM J. McANENEY
President, Hudson Motor Car Company

WE have built these models up to and beyond the 1931 standards of performance and quality in every way, and have never in our history offered so many improvements. Quality is greater down to the last detail. Every phase of performance has been greatly improved, and the luxury we have built into the cars is substantially greater than ever before. Motors are larger and more powerful. An efficient system of oil cooling is introduced. A marked improvement in carburetion increases flexibility and economy. Bodies are longer and wider. These cars possess the finest, easiest riding qualities. For the first time, such comfort is available at these low prices. Only great manufacturing economies and the fact that our large resources permit us to take the fullest possible advantage of reduced commodity prices have enabled us to offer the public the greatest combination of quality and low prices in our entire history.

Owner-Management Permits Exclusive Value Advantages

Owner-management enables Hudson-Essex to give you outstanding advantages in quality and price. The men who are now guiding its destinies have been with the company since its inception twenty-two years ago. Its department heads and principal distributors are its controlling owners. Their independence is backed by unusually large resources in capital and plant facilities. It enables Hudson-Essex to lead in design and engineering quality. It permits economies in manufacture and distribution that bring exceptional quality direct to the public at distinct price advantages.

REPAIRS ON DO-X WILL TAKE MONTH

Prospective Flight Overseas Indefinitely Postponed, Her Crew Scatters.

CRAFT IS TOWED TO DOCK

Lisbon, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Their dream of a flight across the Atlantic gone up in smoke, the crew of the German flying boat DO-X today started scattering in various directions while their ship lay crippled, one wing destroyed by fire.

Capt. Frederich Christiansen, the commander, said he would remain in Lisbon with a reduced crew to supervise repairs to the plane. The DO-X was towed by submarine this morning to the docks at Belem. It is expected the repairs will take a month.

The fire is believed to have started from a short circuit in an auxiliary engine room which houses a small 10-horsepower motor for charging the wireless batteries. The blaze spread to a gasoline tank in the left wing, causing an explosion.

Six members of the crew, who were aboard the ship, fought the blaze with hand extinguishers and prevented it from spreading. The wing was destroyed, but the other parts escaped damage except that the hull was blackened by smoke, and the passengers' quarters were soaked with water.

Maurice Dornier, one of the designers of the plane, plans to leave tomorrow for Friedrichshafen. Lieut. Clarence A. Schildhauer, the American copilot, will leave within the next few days for the United States. The German members of the crew, except for the skeleton group, kept with the ship, have started back to Germany.

The American engineers, Harvey Brewton and H. Gody, in charge of the Curtiss motors with which the plane is equipped, will leave in a few days after they have completed an inspection of the motors. Brewton plans a vacation trip in northern Africa, while Gody will join the Dornier works in Holland.

20,000 FILIPINOS JOIN KATIPUNANS

30,000 STAGE PARADE

Manila, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—During a demonstration today commemorating Andres Bonifacio, Filipino patriot, 20,000 Filipinos became members of the new Katipunan nationalistic organization which hopes to prove to the United States the Philippine Islands want independence.

The association, recently organized by Manuel Roxas, speaker of the House of Representatives of the insular legislature, is designed to unify various elements behind the independence campaign and to prove the islands are economically capable of supporting a government.

Bonifacio was the organizer of the original Katipunan revolutionary association through which the revolt against Spain in 1896 was begun. He is honored here with the martyred Jose Rizal, the Filipino national hero. A parade by some 30,000 men, women and children for a mile and a half under the scorching tropical sun to the legislative building was preceded by administration of an oath of allegiance to the executive committee of the new Katipunan party by Roxas.

Nationalism was the keynote of the day and every participant was supposed to wear only clothing manufactured in the Philippines. The organization's executive committee wore "barong tagalog," a coat made of hemp and buttoned up the front to the collar.

All but two of the speeches were in the native tagalog.

Speakers emphasized the fact the new Katipunan party was not anti-foreign but only strongly Filipino. Use of native products in preferance to foreign was urged as means of creating an economically independent nation.

The robbery took place at Thirteenth street and North Carolina avenue northeast. Lawrence was unable to see the car's tag numbers.

Air Mail Service To Rio Is Opened

U. S. Flier Covers 860 Miles From Bahia in 8½ Hours.

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—S. J. Williamson, flying a Sikorsky amphibian, brought the first United States air mail to the capital of Brazil this afternoon, marking a new era in commercial relations between the two republics.

He flew the 860 miles from Bahia in 8½ hours, making three stops en route. His cargo, 52 sacks of mail, left Miami, Fla., a week ago, and thus the trip cut the steamer mail time between New York and Rio by six days.

Return mail will leave here Tuesday morning and arrive in New York seven days later, since the northward trip is one day shorter than that to the South.

American Missionary Held by Chinese Bandits

Shanghai, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Missionary dispatches from Hankow received here today said Bert Nelson, American Lutheran missionary from Minneapolis, was being held in a bandit camp near Kwangshan in southern Honan Province.

The dispatches said the bandits treated Nelson considerately, although they were impatiently demanding payment of ransom and had threatened to kill the missionary unless the money was forthcoming immediately. Almost nothing had been heard of Nelson's whereabouts since his capture by briganda October 5.

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

CARNERA GAINS DECISION OVER PAULINO IN SPAIN

Maryland U. Plays State Rivals

Pease, Hurt in Vandy Fray, May Not Play on Saturday.

MARYLAND'S weary footballers, back from a disastrous invasion of Nashville, Tenn., and a four-day trip that carried them into two battles, begin today preparing to meet Western Maryland's Green Terrors in the wind-up game for both clubs next Saturday in the Baltimore Stadium.

The Hopkins game last Thursday and the Vanderbilt clash Saturday doubtless sapped the Terrapins of much strength. They had expected to find the going easy against Hopkins but were unpleasantly surprised by the Blue Jays' remarkably strong defense. The result was that they had to extend themselves twice in three days, an ordeal not conducive to their meeting the Terrors in the best of physical condition.

Just what procedure of practice Curly Byrd has mapped out for the Terrapins was not known last night, but it was thought probable that today's workout will prove more or less a limbering-up affair and that perhaps no real hard drill will be indulged in the balance of the week.

Pease May Be Out Saturday.

Several of the Terrapins received sprains and bruises in the Vanderbilt game but all responded quickly to treatment except Al Pease, right end, who sustained a badly wrenched ankle. Pease may be unable to play against Western Maryland.

Western Maryland had a comparatively easy contest last Saturday with Muhlenberg and likely will enter the Baltimore engagement holding an advantage in physical condition. Coach Dick Harlow's players are a husky lot, anyway; that is, they are above the average in respect to stamina. It takes broken bones to keep any of them on the sidelines, so it seems judging from past experiences.

The coming game offers Maryland a chance to snap the long Western Maryland winning streak. It was Maryland that scored the last defeat of the Westminster machine, back in 1928. Maryland had a chance to stop its State rival a year ago but failed dismally, the Terrors winning rather handily, 12 to 0.

W. Maryland Ranks Heavy Favorite.

Western Maryland will be the favorite next Saturday, probably at odds of 8 to 5, perhaps at 2 to 1. While it is true that the Terrors have not been meeting as strong opposition on the whole as Maryland, it nevertheless is apparent that they pack a potent wallop. Seemingly, Harlow's eleven has been winning its games without "bearing down." The only exceptions have been the Georgetown and Albright clashes. Against Georgetown the Terrors stepped on the gas to gain a 10-to-0 decision, while against Albright they had to throw everything they had into the game to finish in a tie, 7 to 7.

RISKO MEETS MALONEY FRIDAY

Heavyweights to Hold Spotlight in U. S. This Week.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—The boxing spotlight shifts its rays from New York to various other sections of the Nation this week as bike racing occupies Madison Square Garden.

The big fellows of the ring also are regaining their share of the interest after yielding to smaller men for several weeks. Maxie Rosenbloom, the light heavyweight champion who can find few good opponents, is slated to cash in on his title to some extent in St. Louis Tuesday night when he meets "K. O." Phil Kaplan, of Meriden, Conn., in a nontitle bout. Rosenbloom had defeated his veteran rival twice before.

Jimmy Maloney, favorite of Boston fans, who grabbed himself a large slice of the calcium light last fall when he beat big Primo Carnera, makes another appearance in the Boston Garden ring Friday night against Johnny Risko, Cleveland's still sturdy rubber man. They have met twice before. In 1928 Maloney won a decision and in 1929 scored a three-round knockout.

Other bouts on the week's national schedule include:

Tuesday, at St. Louis, Eddie Ran, Poland, vs. Vickie Purvis, Indianapolis, welterweights, ten rounds; Sammy Offerman, St. Louis, vs. Ray Alfano, East St. Louis, lightweights, ten; Freddie Haverlak, New York, vs. Lou Terry, St. Louis, lightweights, ten; at Indianapolis, Harry Dillon, Winnipeg, vs. Tony Cancela, Detroit, lightweights, ten; Frankie Jarr, Fort

Westbrook Pegler Says

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.
Special to The Washington Post.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—A whole city of sport-daffy men and women subjected themselves to three hours of cold rain Saturday afternoon to watch Notre Dame and the Army, two previously undefeated football teams and partners in a dramatic rivalry, play their annual game on the soggy ground of Soldiers Field on the lake front. The damp, heavy air was foul with the breath of the railroad locomotives down in the cut and with the outpourings from the city chimneys.

You didn't breathe it, but bit off hunks of the atmosphere on this lake front and fletcherized it.

At half past one, when the game began, there were several thousand vacant seats in an amphitheatre arranged to hold about 120,000, but there were still thousands of fanatics trudging across the rickety wooden catwalks above the railroad, where the smoke and steam leaked upward through the cracks between the planks.

Army Demands Privacy After Loss of Game.

In time, the vacant patches filled, all but a few seats in the temporary bleachers behind the end zone in the open end of the horse-shoe, and a few rows on the rim of the eastern side, where the beat of rain off the lake was a little too insistent even for the football nut. The wooden bleachers are set about 75 yards from the end of the playing field and the view from there is so bad that the customers so placed are just barely present.

After the Army had lost the football game, 7 to 6, by the margin of a blocked kick after a touchdown, there was some individual dejection in their dressing room. The dark tunnel outside their quarters was crowded with young Army officers from various forts and flying fields waiting to be invited in one by one to visit the athletes and coaches.

Chick Harding, a quarter back of a few years ago, and an assistant coach last year, had flown up from Kelley Field, Tex., stopping at Fort Sill, Okla., to pick up Capt. Bill Jones, the former head coach and a war-time artillery observer. Then he had parked his plane at Rantoul, Ill., and when he returned there to fly it over to Chicago today he flew into a fog and wandered around until the game was almost over.

There were two policemen on the door and for a while after the team retired to have their wrappings cut from their hides with surgical shears by Doc Hauck, the trainer, himself a former Cadet, the old grads were kept out.

Even Lieut. Byers, the young cavalryman now of Fort Riley, but last year an assistant to the graduate manager at West Point, kept his distance, not asking to be let in, so that Maj. Ralph Sasse and the assistant coaches could have a few minutes privacy with the team.

In a little while, however, the immediate emotional reaction had passed. Young Prince, the tackle on the left side, had been accusing himself rather severely because Marchie Schwartz, the Notre Dame half back, had gone by him in the run for the touchdown in the final quarter. But Maj. Sasse said this play had also gone

MINOR LOOPS IN SESSION TODAY

Draft Discussion Due at Montreal Confabs This Week.

MONTREAL, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Baseball notables, representing teams from the Pacific to the Atlantic Coast, and from Mexico to Canada, poured into Montreal tonight for the annual gathering of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues.

Starting tomorrow with the meetings of the International and Pacific Coast Leagues, baseball officials have ahead of them a busy week which promises to bring several important questions up for decisions.

National Association Meets Wednesday.

The National Association meeting, the only one for which a definite program has yet been set, opens its sessions Wednesday and closes Friday, but meetings of various separate leagues and associations promise a full week of business.

One outstanding issue is to be discussed at tomorrow's meetings of the International and Pacific Coast Leagues and probably at the National meeting later. That is the universal draft question, on which the big minors are at odds with the major leagues. There is no indication from either of these Class AA leagues that they will change the stand that they took at the meeting with the majors in Cleveland.

Today was the last day of grace under the old agreement and, unless

Hawks Defeat Alexandria Celtics

Indians Block Kick to Score; Celtic Pass Gains 6 Points.

CONVERTING the point after touchdown in football is sometimes as important as touching all the bases on a drive over the right-field wall, then again it becomes only an inconsequential formality. Yesterday the Mohawks and Celtics made a touchdown apiece, but the Mohawks put the finishing touches on theirs and the Celtics didn't. Because the pay-off is on points and not touchdowns, the Mohawks gained a 7-to-6 decision. Some 2,000 fans viewed the proceedings, despite the rain.

Art Browning has played some ten years in the Morawk line with an occasional tackle in an open field, an intercepted pass or two and a few recovered fumbles as the meritorious spots of his career. Previous to this season Browning was never out of the scrimmage line when the ball was snapped. As the years passed and his legs began to slow down, a secret ambition to have some hand in that mysterious business in the back field faded.

Browning Gets Chance And Makes Good.

But Browning finally got his chance. Not as a pile-driving full back or a fast-stepping half back, but as a placement kicker. Although this job didn't let him get his hands on the ball, it gave him the opportunity to get off his hands and knees.

So yesterday when the Hawks found themselves the possessors of a touchdown and the ball was brought out to its customary position on the 5-yard line, Browning had the satisfaction of seeing one of the haughty Mohawk backs crawl into the line, while he became the center of attraction. And he made good.

To get back to the grunt and pull department of the game, the Mohawks had their hands full in taking the decision. A blocked kick proved the scoring medium for six of their points. In the first period, after Hawks had carried the ball down the field and were stopped on the edge of the goal line, Moore attempted to punt but Leonard broke through to block the ball which went bounding behind the Celtic goal, where he recovered for a touchdown.

The Celtics made their touchdown in the second period on a 12-yard pass, from Mooney to Kennedy, with the latter falling across the line in the center of a group of Mohawk tacklers. Moore missed his try for the point.

Celtics Carry Battle To Mohawks.

The Alexandria eleven played even better ball than that of the Apache game. They carried the fight to the Mohawks in the second half while keeping the Indians from making a first down. However, they could not advance beyond the 30-yard line.

Aside from a few runs by Dick Allen and some intercepted passes, the second half provided one of the biggest thrills of the game. Joe Sweeney tossed a pass down the center of the field and Buck O'Brien, Mohawk end, was about to take the ball over his shoulder when a Celtic player jumped for the ball. One of the players touched the ball and it bounded into the arms of Fee Colliere, Mohawk quarter back, who was traveling at top speed. Colliere kept on to the goal line. However, the ball was brought back with the ruling that the Celtic player did not touch the ball.

Gain Capital City League's 150-Pound Crown as Columbia's Eliminate Only Contenders, 12-9; Preps and Palace Win.

By JOHN V. HINKEL.

THE Centennials automatically clinched the 150-pound section championship of The Post's 1930 Capital City Football League yesterday afternoon, despite the fact they were idle because of a bye. The Columbias ended the title race by beating the Brentwood Hawks, 12 to 9, thereby eliminating the only other club that had a chance for the honor.

The new champs have won six and tied one, and have only one more game to play before they close their section schedule. Included in their list of victories are triumphs over Palace-District Grocery Stores, Northern Preps, Wolverines, Petworth Pennants, Marshfields and Columbias.

Scoreless Tie With Del Rays Only Black Mark.

A 0-0 tie with Del Ray in their first game of the season is the only blemish on an otherwise spotless record. The Cents meet the Brentwood Hawks next Sunday, but even if they tie or drop this game the championship still will be theirs, as their closest rivals are too far behind to catch them at this stage of the race.

Northern Preps and Palace-District Grocery Stores continued their fight for third place yesterday by beating the Del Rays and Wolverines, respectively, in the only other contests on the section's seventh-round card. The Preps walloped the Virginians, 20 to 0, and the Wolves bowed to the Southwesters, 13 to 0.

A first half forward passing attack which netted two touchdowns enabled the Columbias to whip the Hawks on the Gonzaga field before 300 spectators. After scoring a safety in the first period, the Brentwoods thereafter were kept in complete check until the final quarter, when they shoved across their lone touchdown and made a gallant effort to register another.

The Marylanders started out as if they intended to push the Columbias all over the field, penetrating to the Northeasters' 23-yard strip before

Rauber's Punting Aid to D. C. Champs; Both Threaten.

Special to The Washington Post.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 30.—Splashing and skidding up and down a muddy field, the Apache Club, of Washington, battled the Irvington Club eleven to a scoreless deadlock this afternoon at Gibbons Field. Neither team was able to take advantage of the scoring chances which were few and far between.

Several times the Irvington eleven cruised slowly goalward, but each time was halted without any serious threat. In the second period, the local team opened a passing attack which carried them to midfield. Then Tanton, on a fake kick formation, heaved a long pass to West. But the ball was too heavy to handle and fell several feet short of the receiver, who had a clear field.

Ty Rauber Tries Passes.

Ty Rauber, the Apache quarter back, also tried several dangerous passes, but none were completed. Rauber's fine punting was one of the features of the battle, his boots sailing consistently 50 yards.

Apaches and Mohawks Plan for Game Tonight

With their annual clash scheduled for next Sunday, the Apache and Mohawk representatives will meet tonight in the sports department of the Post at 8:30 o'clock to complete plans for the "sandlot classic." Eligibility lists will be exchanged and officials named. Patsy Donovan will handle the affairs of the Mohawks, while the Apaches will have Seymour Hall as their representative.

Real Battle Is Promised Marines by Coast Guard

Bears Resent Rating as "Pushovers" in Charity President Cup Grid Game Saturday and Predict Dope Upset.

FOOTBALL fans who expect to go to Griffith Stadium for the President's Cup charity game anticipating that the Marines will walk all over a makeshift opponent are likely to be rudely surprised before the long purple shadows of approaching dusk streak the gridiron.

Coast Guard officers and men, from the seal herd of the Bering Straits to the patrol areas off Florida, are firmly convinced that this is a Coast Guard year.

Coast Guard Grabs Chance To Play Cup Game.

You've got to give this little old outfit credit. Backed by 140 years of proud service and glorious tradition, the Coast Guard snapped up the chance to horn into the President's Cup game when the Army and Navy dropped out and left the Leathernecks literally "holding the bag."

The Coast Guard tackled the issue in the same style the Marines had done. They formed an All-Coast Guard team. Not unlike the Marines when they hauled such stellar players of other days as Willis Ryckman and Frank Goettge from Peking and Honolulu, the Coast Guard went through its service muster rolls with a fine tooth comb and brought out its football stars.

In 1928 they tackled the Marines at New London. The Marines won, but the Coast Guard Bear went down fighting and clawing to the last whistle. In 1929 at Griff Stadium the Bears did better. They kept the Marines on the defensive during the first half only to see the Leathernecks throw a flurry of successful forward heaves that won for them in the latter part of the fracas. It was a good fight and firmly convinced the Coast Guardsmen that just one more year of competition would do the trick.

Coast Guard Eleven Boasts Enviable Record.

Under Head Coach Irving Baker, Coast Guard football attack and defense improved. A schedule against college teams, many of whom had played the Marines, was adopted. This year the Coast Guard dropped a real tough luck game to Canisius College and tossed one off 6 to 0 to Rider College. But the Coast Guardsmen stopped such college teams as Providence College, Connecticut Aggies, Seton Hall, Rhode Island State, St. Bonaventure, Penn State Teachers and others.

Many will, no doubt, go to the game because it is the last show of the local football season and there are no counter attractions. Others will go because the Coast Guard and the Marines have turned over the gate to sweet charity in the relief of the unemployed.

This is the third time this year that a Coast Guard team has done this. Aiding others in distress is the Coast Guard's business and they carried it even to the football field three time in a row while other teams were talking about doing so.

Bears Figure on Upsetting Devil Dogs.

Some will go to the game on the contest's legitimate appeal as a football game. The latter are not likely to be disappointed. The Coast Guard Bear is full of fight and confidence this year. A lot of Marines, cheaty with years of strangle hold on the President's Cup, might be sadly turned around. At least the Coast Guard followers really believe this is their year and their record proves they are far from being a pushover for any man's ball club.

LION CANDIDATES OUT.

State College, Pa., Nov. 30.—Next Wednesday will mark the opening of the Penn State winter sports training season with basket ball, boxing and wrestling candidates reporting.

Savoldi Second Fiddle To Grange; Bears Win

Chicago, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Red Grange had another one of his galloping days today and the Chicago Bears defeated the Portsmouth Spartans, 14 to 6, in a National League football game at Wrigley Field. Grange gained every time he started, scored a touchdown, and tossed a pass to Luke Johnsos for the other.

In spite of the $1,000 fine assessed against them for signing and using Joe Savoldi, the Bears employed the jumping Italian today. He carried the ball six times for 31 yards.

90,000 Watch Contenders In Bout

Some Booing Follows Verdict; Referee's Vote Decides.

Italian's Reach Aids in Victory; 'Gate' of $110,000.

BARCELONA, Spain, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Primo Carnera, giant Italian heavyweight, outpointed Paulino Uzcudun, rugged Basque woodchopper, in a ten-round bout fought before 90,000 spectators here today. Referee Moss Deyong cast the deciding vote after the two judges disagreed.

There was some booing when the official verdict was announced and a few fist fights broke out among the more choleric fans, but the thousand police detailed to prevent disorders had not the slightest difficulty controlling the big crowd.

Paulino's Attempts Frustrated.

Paulino's attempts to bring the fight to close quarters were frustrated by Carnera's tremendous reach and heighth. Carnera kept the rushing Spaniard at bay with straight rights and lefts throughout most of the fight.

Carnera weighted 269¾, Paulino 206¾.

The Associated Press score card credited Carnera with winning the first, second, seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth rounds, and Pauline the fourth, fifth and sixth, with the third even.

The "gate" was estimated at 1,000,000 pesetas, about $110,000.

Selecting 'All" Teams Dropped by Conference

Chicago, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—The North Central Conference at its annual meeting today decided to abandon the practice of selecting an all-conference football team "or all teams" of any kind. It was decided that the naming of an all-conference team served no particular purpose and that, although the conference is small, such a team could not be selected fairly. The group, which includes North Dakota State College, South Dakota State College, North Dakota University, South Dakota University and Morningside College, also decided to abandon its annual cross-country championship meet.

Stribling Leaves Plane; Starts Training Today

Macon, Ga., Nov. 30 (A.P.).—W. L. (Young) Stribling, who is wont to fly as well as fight, left here today on a train for Chicago to begin training for his bout on December 12 with Tuffy Griffiths.

Stribling explained his mode of travel by pointing to rain and to a telegram signed by Sidney N. Stratz, president of the Stadium Corporation in Chicago, urging him to stop flying until after his fight there.

Green Bay Regains Lead in Pro League

New York, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—The Green Bay Packers regained first place in the National Football League today by defeating the Stapleton team, 37 to 7, before 12,000 Staten Island fans. The Packers turned what was expected to be a close game into a rout as Blood, Molenda, Llewellyn, Engelmann and Hubbard ran through the Stapes for scores. Blood got two touchdowns and the others one apiece. Stapleton's only score came when Ken Strong ran 65 yards through a broken field for a touchdown and then kicked the extra point.

The Packers evidently learned some lessons from their recent defeat by the New York Giants, which cost them the lead for a while, as they displayed a fine passing game, closely resembling that of Benny Friedman's team. Passes paved the way for the first Packer touchdown in the opening period and again in the second.

Cagle Hurt as Giants Lose Pennant Chance

New York, Nov. 30 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Jack McBride, one of the greatest backs ever developed at Syracuse University and a cast-off of the New York Giants two years ago, still is a mighty fine player. He was the big hero of the 7-to-6 victory that the Brooklyn Dodgers scored over the Giants in a desperately fought game before 20,000 fans at the Polo Grounds this afternoon. The defeat ruined the Giants' chances of winning the pennant.

The Dodgers worked the ball to the half-yard line and then McBride, on a plunge through center, took it over. But that only tied the score. McBride dropped back and drove his right foot against the ball. It sailed into the air and across the bar, almost between the middle of the two posts. It was a perfect kick and the referee signalled that the point had been scored.

Chris Cagle, former Army captain, playing with the Giants, was jarred so hard in the third period that he was forced to leave the game.

EARLIER FINISH OF MARYLAND FALL RACING URGED

1930 Longest Season of East

152 Favorites in 399 Maryland Races Were Winners.

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

WILD geese passed southward sometime ago, and those who shivered the closing days of the Eastern racing season at Bowie are of the opinion that the horses should have gone South with the flight of the geese. The Eastern racing season is too long, and was stretched out this year beyond the former limit, especially in New York. The half-mile tracks in Maryland are growing in importance, and they begin in the fall before the major tracks open.

Bowie opens the Eastern racing on April 1, and closes on Thanksgiving Day, or later. New York gets going about the middle of April and runs further and further into November, trying in vain to compete with the larger tracks in Maryland from October on. This impairs the New York racing, if it does not actually degrade it.

Horses Follow Big Purses.

Horses are gong to follow the big purses, and the players are going to get away from the domination of syndicated books and go to parimutuel tracks as soon as possible after the larger New York tracks—Belmont Park and Saratoga—have closed.

The racing has been succesful in Maryland, although crippled in the mutuel "handle." The standout 2-year-old in Maryland racing was C. V. Whitney's Equipoise, winner of the Pimlico Futurity and other stakes. The best 3-year-old racing in the Old Line State was William Ziegler's Spinach, and the best older horse—standing almost alone in his division toward the wind-up of the season—was W. S. Kilmer's Sun Beau. These three horses got the big money.

A. C. Bostwck's Mate, Mrs. Payne Whitney's Twenty Grand and Preston Burch's juvenile charges, including Happy Scot, Sweep All and Tambour, were close up to the leaders. Are Light, Tourist II and Actor outranked the steeplechasers in Maryland.

Dixiana Farm's Sweep All, which defeated Admiral Grayson's Happy Scot in the Endurance Handicap for 2-year-olds Saturday, and which had run Mate a close second in the Walden at Pimlico, improved with each race. He won three races during the year and all of them were at Bowie. He won on April 1 at the first asking, and on returning to Bowie in November scored twice.

Choices Won 152 of 399 Races In Maryland.

The colt and Happy Scot are expected to cut an important figure in the 3-year-old division next season. On the whole, Maryland horses got the lion's share of the purses hung out this fall.

There were 399 races during the 57 days of the autumn sport in Maryland, and favorites won 152 of these. Havre de Grace showing 35, Laurel 61, Pimlico 23 and Bowie 33. Alfred Robertson led the riders at the Bowie meeting. Of the jockeys who rode through all of the Maryland meetings, Eddie Watters topped the list with 31 winnings. Adams and Workman, with 28 each, and Robertson, with 26, were next in the ranking.

Backwoodsman was the longest shot of the season, paying 66 to 1 at Laurel. Hacky H. paid 34 to 1 at Bowie. Chianti was 25 to 1 at Havre de Grace and both Inception and Girard were 25 to 1 at Pimlico. Mill Bay paid $175 at Laurel for place, while Bowie paid $109 for place at Pimlico.

The current meetnig at Jefferson Park will end the last day of December, and the Fair Grounds, also at New Orleans, will open January 1 and run till Mardi Gras in February. Miami will open its winter meeting the middle of January. St. Johns Park, near Jacksonville, will open an intermediary meeting beginning on Christmas Day.

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

JEFFERSON PARK, at New Orleans, is pioneering for the winter tracks quite successfully, according to the attendance and class of horses during the first few days of the meeting at the Parish course begun on Thanksgiving Day. The purses are somewhat lower than on the Eastern tracks, and in fact than those of the majority of summer race courses, but the

NATS LED LEAGUE IN BASE-RUNNING FIGURES SHOW

Nats Had Most Men Left, Official List Reveals.

Manush Led Team in Hitting With Mark of .350

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

OFFICIAL batting averages for the past American League season are released for consideration before the "Hot Stove League's" next meeting and will be found in another column of this morning's Post. These should prove to be of considerable interest to followers of Manager Walter Johnson's Nationals.

The figures show that the hit is not altogether the thing in the national game, for the third-place finishing Yankees topped the pack as a team, with the Cleveland Indians second, the Nats third and the pennant-winning Athletics in fourth place. The respective figures are .309, .304, .302 and .294, the flag winners being the first of the five teams not getting within the charmed .300 circle.

Nationals Best Pilferers In League.

Johnson's charges led in two respects, one good and the other bad, showing the way as base runners, with 101 thefts to their credit, while also having the most runners left stranded on the base paths. The Nats were third in most runs and most hits, fourth in total bases, third in doubles, second in triples and seventh in home-run standing, beating out only the lowly Red Sox.

Individually, however, the Washington players stacked up pretty well. As every one should know by this time, Al Simmons won the championship, having an average of .381, with Lou Gehrig next, with .379. Heinie Manush is the first Nat whose name appears on the list, the big left fielder rating ninth among players participating in at least 50 games. Manush has a .350 mark to show for his season's work, this being just 42 points higher than the figures of Goose Goslin, for whom Manush was obtained from the Browns in a trade.

Excluding the battery men, every Washington regular except Ossie Bluege hit .300 or better, Sam Rice ranking second, with .349, and Joe Cronin next, with .346. Somewhat of a surprise is the fact that Sammy West beat out Capt. Joe Judge, their respective marks being .328 and .326, with Buddy Myer just getting in the elite class with a .303 set of figures.

Hodapp Shows Way at Two-Base Hitter.

In addition to leading the league as regards high average, Simmons also led in runs scored, was third in hits, second in total bases, and fifth in home runs.

Johnny Hodapp, of the Tribe, made the most hits and the most doubles, being one of the few players to collect more than 50 two-baggers in a single season in the entire history of the league.

Babe Ruth, as usual, led his league in homers, but failed to equal his record of 60, his 49 total being just 11 short. Earl Combs, of the Yankees, cracked out the most triples; "Mule" Haas, of the A.'s, the most sacrifices, and the veteran, Marty McManus, of the Tigers, showed the way to the base stealers.

Of many interesting individual feats only a few may be cited.

In a double header on September 17 Averill made four home runs in five times up, three in the first game and one in the second. In the first game he tied the league record by driving in eight runs. July 29 Morgan made five hits in five times at bat and drove in five runs. Morgan also hit 26 home runs, this being the first time in history that a Cleveland player hit more than 20 homers.

Three Homers in One Game Almost a Habit.

Besides Averill, Gehrig, Ruth and Reynolds hit three home runs in a single game. Reynolds made his record in three consecutive times at bat and also tied the record by driving in eight runs, while Gehrig performed this feat twice. Thus, the league record for driving across runs in a single game was tied four times. Falk, Combs and Lazzeri each scored five runs in a game while in fifteen consecutive games Gehrig counted one or more runs in each game for a total of 24. Stone hit safely in 34 consecutive games July 5 to August 9, inclusive, a record for the season.

Virginia Juniors 7-0 Victors Over Mercs

Alexandria, Nov. 30.—Taking advantage of all breaks, the Virginia Athletic Club Juniors today rung up their ninth victory of the season defeating the Mercury Juniors, winners of the 125-pound title in the Sport Mart League, 7-0.

The game was sponsored by the fire department auxiliary and all proceeds went to the city ambulance fund. Several hundred fans witnessed the battle, which was played in Baggett's Stadium.

Mahoney's 12-yard dash over tackle in the third period netted the Virginians the victory. The locals had been placed in scoring position by Gensmere, who tore off two long runs after the locals had received the ball on Mercury's 32-yard line.

C. U. ELEVEN PLAYS N. Y. TEAM

City College Comes Here for Contest Next Season.

CITY COLLEGE OF NEW YORK eleven, one of the several smaller football teams of the metropolitan area, has been scheduled by Catholic University for a game to be played in Brookland Stadium next October 3, it was learned yesterday.

C. C. N. Y. has never been met before on the gridiron by Catholic U., but it has appeared here against George Washington. The New York team ranks about the same as Catholic in the football world.

It is believed that C. C. N. Y. takes the place of Franklin and Marshall on the Brooklanders' schedule, which has not yet been announced. Franklin and Marshall defeated Catholic University here this season by 22 to 7.

Other teams which Catholic U. already has scheduled for 1931 games are Boston College, Holy Cross and Duquesne. George Washington also will be met again by the Brookland outfit, it is expected.

8,000 Crowd Watches Start of Bike Races

New York, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—New York's semiannual sleepless week started promptly at 9 o'clock tonight when the starting gun was fired for the fifty-ninth international six-day bicycle race at Madison Square Garden.

A crowd of about 8,000 highly enthusiastic fans were on hand to see the fifteen teams sent away at the long grind that will not end until next Saturday night. As usual, sprint prizes as well as the major money awards were to be given to the 30 pedal pushers to spur their efforts.

Eight nations are represented in this race. They are Italy, Germany, Belgium, France, Switzerland, Australia, Canada and the United States.

they were stopped. Shamburg was spilled for a 15-yard loss shortly after and on the next play Healy fumbled and recovered behind his own goal line for a safety.

Columbias Score on 70-Yard March Down Field.

Columbias came right back to march 70 yards for a touchdown. A succession of short line bucks and two successive forward passes, Healey to Barnes, one for 26 yards, and the other for 12, put the ball on Brentwood's 16-yard strip. Healey then dropped back and shot a short pass to Harper for the 6-pointer. Harper's place-kick attempt for the extra point was blocked.

A 45-yard advance netted the Columbias their second touchdown early in the next quarter. With the pigskin on the Hawks' 5-yard line, Healey faked an end run and tossed to Hengtsler, who was standing in the end zone. Pieffer's drop-kick for goal was wide.

A determined Columbia offense went to pieces for a short time in the last period and allowed the Hawks to hang up a touchdown. Harstock spun through tackle for 3 yards and a score after he and his mates had brought the ball up from midfield. Simpson drop-kicked the extra point. A second Brentwood touchdown sortie in the dying moments of the contest was checked in the shadow of the Columbia goal, largely through the fine defensive work of Wood, Bruzbart and Harper.

Pieffer, Healey, Wood, Harper and Kurtz stood out for Columbia, while Williams, Holt and Harstock looked best for the losers.

Northern Preps Outclass Del Ray Team.

Scoring their initial touchdown in the first three minutes of play, the Northern Preps outclassed the Del Rays in every department of play in a contest staged on the Silver Spring Field. The Virginians were handicapped severely by lack of suitable reserve strength.

Sorrell and Hargett collaborated to give the Redbirds their first six-pointer on one of the prettiest forward pass plays seen on a Capital City grid this season. On the sixth play of the game, Sorrell tossed a 34-yard heave to Hargett, who dashed 21 yards for a touchdown. Snoots then place-kicked goal.

Houston went over for the second Northern touchdown early in the third period on a 16-yard sweep around end, after Kessler's 46-yard jaunt off-tackle had put the ball within scoring distance. The Redbirds' third touchdown was registered by Reed in the fourth quarter on an 8-yard plunge through center. Reed succeeded only once in his two attempts to rush for the extra point.

The Del Rays never penetrated any farther than the Preps' 32-yard line at any point during the struggle. In fact, so tight was the Northern defense that the Virginians registered only two first downs.

Palace-D. G. S. Pass Beats Wolverines.

Marshall, Kessler, Sorrell, Street and Hoy were the most prominent in the Redbird play. Outstanding for Del Ray were Darley, Perry and Utterback.

A long forward pass and a long run back of a punt spelled defeat for the Wolverines in their game with Palace-District Grocery Stores on the Silver Spring Field. Outside of these two offensive thrusts, the game was evenly played throughout.

Tonker passed 28 yards to L. Reagen midway in the first period, and Reagen was pulled down 2 yards from the Wolverine goal. Tonker then crashed through tackle for a touchdown on two attempts. W. Reagen place-kicked goal.

Shortly after the second half started, E. Scanlon took a Wolverine punt and dodged and twisted his way through the entire Northeast Team for 45 yards and a six-pointer. Tonker failed to add the extra point from placement.

The Wolves got inside Palace's 13-yard line on two occasions, to be stopped cold each time. The game for the most part was a kicking duel between Tonker, of Palace, and Phillips, of the Wolverines. A feature of the contest was Frank Littlefield's catch of Minor's 38-yard pass in the fourth quarter, which availed the Wolves but little, as the game ended shortly afterward.

The line play of M. Stone, J. Peters and R. Vernon and the offensive work of Tonker and Divvers stood out for Palace. Bell's ball-carrying and Crist's tackling were Wolverine high lights.

Martinsburg Firemen Beat Frederick, 13-2

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 30.—Hose Company, No. 5, of this city, three-time champions of independent football in Tristate District, drew closer to a fourth championship by vanquishing the Frederick Athletic Club, of Frederick, an ancient rival, 13 to 2, here today.

The game which was played on a muddy field, was the last home one for the Martinsburg outfit, which is negotiating for a game in Winchester, Va., next Sunday. Early in the season, Winchester held the locals to a scoreless tie.

Nicodemu was the bright star in today's battle, tallying both touchdowns. Frederick tallied a safety for its 2 points.

VANDERBILT HAS GOOD SEASON

Commodores Again in First Flight of South's Teams.

ATLANTA, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Another Southern Conference football season has ended for Vanderbilt and again a McGugin-coached eleven has finished among the upper ten of the Dixie loop.

Vanderbilt downed Maryland yesterday, 22 to 7, in the only conference game in the South. The victory closed the 1930 ledger for the Commodores, but Maryland must play Western Maryland next week.

While most teams have their ups and downs, Vanderbilt has never been thrust into the lower division. The Commodores, probably the most feared team in the South year after year, have had great seasons which carried them to championships, and also lean years, but have always managed to finish among the better class.

Yesterday, Maryland, playing its second game in three days after winning from Johns Hopkins on Thanksgiving, was no match for the Tennesseans. Lengthy broken field runs for touchdowns, including an 81-yard sprint by Benny Parker, brought triumph as numerous fumbles marred the play of the Old Liners. Vandebilt scored in every period.

Loyola Wins Another Intersectional Fray.

Loyola of New Orleans, the South's leading representative in intersectional strife—in point of games won—marked up its fifth outside win of the year in downing Iowa State, 14 to 7. Loyola has lost but one game thus far in a nine-game schedule and has another game set for next Saturday with Detroit at New Orleans.

The Citadel eked out a 1-point 7-to-6 win over Wofford, and Louisiana Tech beat Louisiana College, 6 to 0, in a pair of Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association tilts. Citadel's touchdown came on a 60-yard run after a 20-yard pass.

Only seven games remain on the current Dixie gridiron program, and all will be played this week.

Prominent among the closing contests slated for next Saturday are the State battles between Georgia and Georgia Tech and Duke and North Carolina, and the duel at Jacksonville Fla., between Tennessee and Florida.

ARMY TEAM PRAISED BY COACH

by three others and told him to break training with the rest of the team and forget all about it. Wen Bowman, the quarter back, sat on a bench, dressed to his overcoat, with his head bowed in his hands, and when he lifted his face his eyes were red.

"Bowman and Prince both felt pretty badly about our losing the game," Maj. Sasse said, "but it was a great, clean game and it has been an inspiration to me to be with these kids. The officiating was fair and competent. Notre Dame has a fine team and I think we have, too. I'm satisfied with the team and I can't tell what a satisfaction it has been to serve with them all season. Now we're going to break training. They haven't had a cigarette or gone to a dance for months and tonight they can do as they like. I told them to cut loose. They can jump in the lake if they want to. We're not asking them to go to any particular party. There are a lot of Army parties in town. They can pick their own."

Irish Mix Up Numbers as Part of Coaching Wizardry.

The players were quietly putting on their clothes or rubbing down after their showers. The Coaches and old grads, most of them in mufti, including Biff Jones, huge and ruddy, talked among themselves, but there was an encircling silence from the players that bespoke a pretty glum state of mind. The inspiration that Maj. Sasse spoke of was reciprocal. Now that they were down, he was moving among them, boosting them back.

The Army's touchdown was an obscure play to most of the saturated assemblage, including no few who were saturated in more than one sense of the word. Frank Carideo, the Notre Dame quarter back, was stalling to waste time after Notre Dame's touchdown. He had called for three bucks before going back to punt. The ball was close to his own goal.

All afternoon, he had been gaining ground with his kicks, getting them away with leisurely calm at the last possible instant, but this time someone broke through, blocked the ball at his toe and sent it tumbling back over the goal, where King fell on it for the touchdown.

At the beginning there was the usual confusion in the Notre Dame numbers. Dan Hanley was partially identified in the backfield, disguised under Moon Mullins' number, 31. There was also one Lukatz, a half back, whose number was nowhere listed and two or three other mysterious characters were spotted, all unknown to the attendance. This veiling of the numbers is a familiar stratagem in the Notre Dame plan and is classified as coaching wizardry.

Some Fans Show Sense and Leave At Half-Time.

The customers were still crowding out of the slush of the long approach to the arena and oozing into their seats as the game went into the second quarter, determined to have a wonderful time enjoying themselves, though they suffered tortures in the process. By this time identification numbers, once white, were one with the dark color of the men's jerseys, their naked legs were only faintly pink through the accumulation of slime and they writhed in their heroic tangles like so many tadpoles in the primeval ooze. Only the bold gleam of the Army's gilded helmets identified the sides in some of the upheavals.

At half-time some of the daffy customers experienced a faint glimmer of returning reason and left the place. One young man in a yellow oilskin coat adorned with many goofy mottoes, was plucked up by the slack of his pants and the scruff of his neck, from a seat on the steaming hay pile behind the Notre Dame bench, and assisted out by a policeman. He reeled back to reason the matter out and this time was hurled with even greater emphasis. Flasks were being uptilted all over the arena with preventive intent and such was the stress of the weather that stimulating effects were not noticeable until the end of the game.

Thereafter, for a long time, young gentlemen and ladies in various moods of inebriety careened about the stadium babbling defiant airs and sprawling in the puddles. Just before Knute Rockne emerged from the catacombs, accompanied by a large guard of friends, a young man made a remarkable broken field run through a team of half a dozen uniformed policemen and a rather heavy taxicab traffic in the wide street outside the stadium.

Antisaloon Leaguer "Dumps" His Man.

He had scored a theoretical touchdown through this opposition when another young man, representing the spirit of the Antisaloon League, reached out as he went by, popped him briskly and virtuously on the chin and dumped him on the back of his neck in an icy pool.

The stadium of Soldiers Field is about a mile from the nearest transportation, and with the taxicab service badly outnumbered, most of the customers tucked their shawls and bottles under their arms and walked. For two hours the taxi starters at the hotels in the Loop had been bleating plaintively on their whistles, but, although hundreds of them were going by, filled, nobody seemed able to find one. There was almost no business done in souvenir footballs, pennants, Army mules and all such miscellany as the boys try to sell to football crowds, but a few deals were made in umbrellas, rubbers and oilcloth strips. A ground crew appeared with shovels and wheelbarrows during the intermission, spreading sand on the field, but when the second half began the players stopped and waded as before.

The open zone behind the north goal, a stretch of about 75 yards, was heaped with dirty hunks of floe ice chipped from the field when the hay blanket was raked away. And in this forbidding scene, after the depressing experience of getting there, the 110,000 sat, the daffiest type of sporting customer in the entire race of sporting nuts, watching two teams of young strangers with almost no identity for them, playing football on a gray, sooty, rainy afternoon close onto December.

FRAME-UP CHARGES DENIED BY RUSSIANS

LEADER IS QUESTIONED

Moscow, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—The self-abasement of eight prominent engineers, on trial under charges of conspiring to overthrow the Soviet government, continued today as the prisoners gave a spirited defense of the ogpu (secret police).

All last week the light appeared on the stand and told their stories into a microphone, admitting all charges of plotting with foreign countries and declaring that they were deserving of punishment.

Today—since Sunday means nothing in the new Russia and the trial went on as usual—the proceedings were enlivened considerably when N. B. Krilenko, the prosecutor, stopped cross-examination long enough to read an article from a recent Warsaw Emigre newspaper charging that the confessions were obtained by an ogpu third degree and that the whole case was a frame-up.

They All Give Denials.

Krilenko, with fiery tongue, indignantly demanded if that were the truth.

One by one the eight prisoners took the stand each declaring the story was "all lies" and the confessions had been made of their own free will, without inducements, promises or threats. They said they had been well-treated in jail.

The prosecutor questioned Prof. Leonid Ramsin, leader of the conspirators, extensively on his visits to Paris and as to his conversations there with exiled Russian capitalists and members of the French general staff. As in recent sessions, however, he took care not to involve the French government directly, Ramsin's testimony referring to "agents of a certain French institution in Moscow" simply by the initials "K. A. R."

Discussed Foreign Intervention.

Ramsin said he met V. Ryabushinsky, former czarist industrialist, in Paris in 1927 and discussed with him the question of foreign intervention as an aid in deposing the Soviets.

"What was the position of the French ruling classes at that time?" cut in the prosecutor.

"I had an idea that French circles then were more active about intervention than members of the Industrial party in Paris," Ramsin replied.

Questioned further, the former president of the All-Union Heating Institute testified:

"I established my first direct contact with the Torgprom (Industrial party) in Paris in 1927. It was then that I met Cois. Janville and Richard of the general staff and was instructed to communicate with them in the future through 'K' in Moscow."

He added that he did communicate with French circles and the Torgprom thereafter through the mysterious initialed French agents in the red capital.

Reads Item in Substantiation.

Here the prosecutor, in order to show that the allegations of intervention plotting in Paris were not a dream of the defendants, read an article by the previously mentioned Ryabushinsky in Vzroudenie, a White Russian newspaper published in Paris. In this the author declared that intervention was necessary, adding that "while every year makes the destruction of the Soviets easier and less costly, still, from an economic standpoint, it would be much more profitable to destroy them now."

The veteran Alexander Fedotov, 67, and oldest of the prisoners, spoke briefly, criticizing the article and calling the Torgprom and French circles foolish.

The trial still resembles a big show, with large numbers of motion picture and still camera men crawling about the stage of the old ballroom, arranging their puttering lights and shooting pictures almost in the faces of the defendants and lawyers, who apparently take it all as a matter of course.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—William H. Woodin, president of the American Car & Foundry Co., said he personally feels that the business depression has "about reached the bottom of things" and "from now on business is going to assume a brighter aspect." "It is a little bit like a child that first must creep before it walks," he added. "I really believe that we have reached the creeping stage toward rehabilitation of business."

An extension of January 15 next in the time for deposit of the various securities affected by reorganization of Wickwire Spencer Steel Co. was announced by the committeee, under whose plan more than 77 per cent of the bonds, more than 84 per cent of class "A" and more than 86 per cent of the class "B" notes of the company already have been deposited.

New municipal financing scheduled for award this week amounts to $12,718,652, compared with offerings of $8,375,000 of such securities last week, the Daily Bond Buyer reports. Forty-nine communities will place issues of varying sizes next week. The largest single issue is $5,000,000 State of Missouri 4 per cent highway bonds due 1943 to 1947, on which bids will be opened Thursday. On Tuesday the State of Idaho will place an issue of $1,300,000 4½ per cent refunding bonds.

All outstanding Campbell Banking Co., real estate first (closed) mortgage 6½ per cent gold bonds, due 1943, have been called for redemption on January 1 next at 105 and accrued interest.

More Pay Less Work, Lesson of Experience

Experience indicates that as wages go up workmen demand shorter hours. The eight-hour movement is at bottom due to the fact that wages have been high. When wages were low men worked twelve hours a day. The same principle explains why men with the highest salaries, instead of working longer hours than others, usually work shorter hours. Merely "feeling the pulse" of a highly organized business, by examining master charts of production, may be all that is needed before its head starts away to play golf.

Bucknell Grid Year Termed Big Success

Special to The Washington Post.

Lewisburg, Pa., Nov. 30.—Winning six games and losing three, two of them by one point margins, Bucknell has just closed one of her most successful seasons on the gridiron. The Bisons ran up a total of 168 points to a total of 59 for her opponents. Bucknell made her largest score in her first game, piling up 46 points to Geneva's 6. The Bisons failed to score in only one game, that with Fordham a week ago, when the Rams won, 12 to 0.

In addition to the victory over the Geneva eleven, Bucknell also won from Penn State, Villanova, Gettysburg, Albright and St. Thomas. Temple and W. & J. joined Fordham in turning in victories over Snavely's cohorts. Both Temple and W. & J. won by 7 to 6 scores. In either game victory might have gone to the Bisons, who outrushed their rivals through much of the two games, though both the Owls and the Presidents won their decision by hard, consistent playing.

Three Star Racers Enter $140,000 Event

Special to The Washington Post.

Agua Caliente, Baja Calif., Mexico, Nov. 30.—Coincident with a reminder broadcasted to horsemen throughout the country by Racing Secretary Jack B. Campbell, that nominations for the second renewal of the $140,000 Agua Caliente Handicap, to be run here on March 22, close on December 2, General Manager James N. Crofton received the nominations of three stars for the big event—Crack Brigade, Ervast and Don Leon—and word of three more brilliant performers who are practically assured to "point" for the "world's richest race"—Questionnaire, Sandy Ford and Reveille Boy.

William A. Porter, Eastern representative of the Agua Caliente Jockey Club, forwarded the signed nomination blank of Thomas A. Cassidy, New York turfman today, for Crack Brigade. Cassidy informed Porter that Crack Brigade is in training under the care of Trainer Joe Bauer, and will be shipped West at the close of the Maryland season. Baron Long nominated the Western champion, Ervast, for the struggle, while from Kentucky came the signed stake blank of Don Leon, rated by most experts as the best juvenile on the Kentucky turf.

U. S. URGED TO HELP IN EDUCATING HAITI

Adequate Schools Program Is Outlined in Report of Commission.

DR. JOHNSON IS MEMBER

(Associated Press.)

The United States Commission of Education in Haiti yesterday recommended to President Hoover that the United States assist in the establishment of an adequate educational system for the Caribbean republic.

The recommendation was based on the belief the United States should do this "in consideration of its vital interest in the progress and stability of states contiguous to the approaches of the Panama Canal.

It was embodied in a report on Haitian educational conditions made by Dr. R. R. Moton, chairman of the commission, after a sojourn of several months with the other four commissioners in Haiti.

Enough Farm Schools.

The commission recommended immediate cessation of capital outlay for more farm schools in Haiti, which it said were not needed as much as progress in other educational lines.

Speaking of the service technique, which is the name for the American inspired system of elementary vocational schools operating under the Haitian Department of Agriculture, the report said this was a "step in the right direction" At the same time it said the present organization of the service technique left much to be desired.

The report declared Haitians were disposed by tradition to favor cultural rather than vocational education. It questioned the wisdom of too much emphasis on the service technique while the secondary junior colleges and colleges operating under the national government are without adequate funds.

Standards Too High.

The commission said it found too much tendency for Americans in charge of the service technique to elevate the system to American standards, which were found extravagant in comparison to those of the other systems, and it was feared the whole strucure of the service technique might collapse as soon as the American occupation was withdrawn.

Sixty-one specific recommendations of the commission included provisions for the return of a unified educational program under the secretary of state for public instruction. For the payment of salaries to American teachers by the United States and not the Haitian government; for a United States Treasury grant or facilitation of a loan from private sources to aid Haiti in meeting its educational problem before the treaty responsible for American occupation expires in 1935.

See Old Displaced.

The report said Haitians suspected that the system of vocational schools imposed by the United States were intended entirely to displace the existing system established by the Haitian people.

Besides Dr. Moton, principal of Tuskegee Institute, other members of the commission were Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University; Prof. Leo M. Favrot, field agent of the General Education Board; B. F. Hubert, president of the Georgia State Industrial College, and Dr. W. T. B. Williams, dean of the college at Tuskegee Institute.

THE MAN WHO KNOWS

608 12th St. N.W.

Over Woolworth's

5c & 10c Store

This strange man sees the way and tells it all. Just what your life has been. Just what it will be. Tells you when and whom you will marry; whether husband, wife or sweetheart is true or false. Tells as to changes, travel, lost or absent friends, divorce, wills, deeds; whether it is best to buy or sell. He tells the good and the bad. A visit will convince you of his wonderful power.

Something tells you this is the man. You feel the impulse to call. Do not delay.

DATA ON ODD JOBS TO BE CONSIDERED BY DISTRICT GROUP

Distribution of 15,000 Cards to Householders to Get Information Sought.

6,000 JOBLESS APPLY ON PUBLISHED BLANKS

Unemployment Relief Body Is Seeking to Raise Fund of $100,000.

A Federation of Citizens Association's request that 15,000 cards be printed for use in soliciting data on odd jobs available in Washington homes will be considered at a meeting of the District Commissioners' unemployment committee today, Frederick A. Delano, chairman of the committee, announced last night.

William A. Roberts, assistant corporation counsel and chairman of the federation's unemployment committee, said the federation itself will print and distribute the cards should the unemployment committee decline to do so.

The cards which the federation wants circulated are patterned after a questionnaire form drawn for it by the bureau of home construction, and would provide a complete record of all odd-job requirements of local home owners.

Cards Are Being Classified.

Mr. Delano said last night that the work of sorting and classifying the 6,000 or more questionnaire cards filled in by jobless applicants for work during the census taken at the public schools two weeks ago is proceeding apace and should be completed tomorrow.

The committee hopes to coordinate its efforts with those of the federation's special unemployment group, he said.

The Commissioners' unemployment committee meanwhile is progressing with its capaign to raise at least $100,000. Mr. Delano announced that his committee was "contacting all employers" and asking them to hire all possible workers.

Dealing With Home Owners.

Mr. Roberts explained that the federation is planning to deal mainly with home owners, of whom 40,000 or more are members of various local associations. Many of these, he pointed out, will provide work doing various tasks around their homes.

There is no desire on the part of the federation, he added, to duplicate the work of the Commissioners' committee. So far as possible, the jobs located by the federation or its member citizens' associations will be filled by them, and any jobs not thus filled will be turned over to Mr. Delano to be filled among applicants registered with his committee.

Pain Way to Christ, Sufferers Are Told

Jesus Leads Through Trial, Rev. C. E. Buck Counsels Hearers.

DR. CALVERT E. BUCK.

The Rev. Calvert E. Buck, superintendent of the Episcopal Ear, Eye and Throat Hospital, preached the sermon yesterday morning in the Church of the Ascension. He took for his text the words of St. John: "When Jesus therefore perceived that they would come and take Him by force to make Him a king, He departed again into the mountain alone." The sermon in part, follows:

"The miraculous feeding of the multitude in the wilderness was, to the Jews, the final proof that Jesus of Nazareth was the long expected Messianic King. Therefore they proceeded, even against His will, to proclaim Him king.

"Jesus, knowing that their conception of His kingdom was warlike, political and completely material, withdrew himself from them.

"Our tendency today is to think of the kingship of Christ in terms of the physical. We are looking for a world freed from hardship, suffering, pain and conflict. We recognize in Christ the power, if so exercised, to bring about this end, and this is the kind of a king most people try to make of Him.

Kingdom Is Spiritual.

"In Advent, Holy Church calls upon her children to prepare to celebrate the birthday of the King. We need to make sure that we realize His is a spiritual kingdom. He comes not to free us from labor, suffering and difficulty, but to lead and guide us through them to a fuller development of our spiritual potentialities.

"He is not king of the body only, but of the soul.

"Civic righteousness, conventional morality, organized philanthropy, do not constitute Christian discipleship. There must be a personal devotion, and allegiance not only to the Jesus of Bethlehem and Calvary, but to Christ, the King of heaven and earth —to the mystical Christ, to the Christ of the sacrament of the altar.

"Must Be in Tune With Him."

"We can not change or alter the ideals and premises of Jesus. We must so change our own lives that our aims and desires, our whole spirit, is in tune with Him.

"Unless we endeavor to do this our joy and adoration at the manager on Christmas will be meaningless and a hollow sham.

"Acknowledging Him as supreme, and His ideals as the highest goal of human life, we can fall in adoration before the Holy Babe and sincerely say, 'My Lord and my God.'"

INDEX OF 90 STOCKS DROPS 3 2-5 POINTS

Traders Believe Low Marks Must Again Be Tested Before General Rise.

CHANGES PROVE NARROW

New York, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Just as Wall street was beginning to take some comfort in the more stable conditions in the stock market, it found itself last week with a troublesome bond market on its hand.

A strong bond market has usually been an important influence toward economic recovery in other times of depression, as investors have concentrated their funds in liens rather than equities.

The bond market has given promise of putting its shoulder to the wheel in encouraging fashion during most of the year. This fall, however, it has been unsettled, first by a drop in the foreign group, particularly Latin Americans, then by the September 10-November 10 decline in stocks and during the past week has had decided sinking spells in the domestic obligations, particularly rails. The price index of 30 representative issues this week has sagged steadily into new low ground for the past two years.

Quiet Sessions Noted.

It is not surprising for bonds to decline along with stocks for a time, as speculators liquidate their investment holdings to bolster marginal accounts, but this sympathetic decline is usually soon ended. The stock market during the past week has moved mostly downward, but it has been quiet, and day to day changes narrow.

Various explanations have been offered for the continued decline in fixed income securities. Bankers state that there has been considerable hasty jettisoning of holdings by small investors who have been alarmed over foreign developments. The selling of the German Young loan bonds is pointed to as an example. This issue has been excitedly sold in response to reports that Germany may ask a moratorium on reparations, when, as a matter of fact, reparations payments are wholly distinct from the interest payments due on German bonds, and a moratorium on reparation would, as a matter of fact, strengthen the finances of the nation and improve the position of its bonds.

Wall street is also inclined to believe that the difficulties of a group of banking and investment institutions in the South have resulted in considerable liquidation of securities held by them and their affiliates. Furthermore, this has probably restrained larger banks from putting their surplus funds into bonds, as they have felt that the situation required the maintenance of a large supply of cash to help small institutions.

Reason for Selling of Rails.

Selling of rail bonds is attributed also to exaggeration in the public mind of the consequences of the shrinkage in rail earnings and of the implications of the rail executives' plan to demand new legislation from Congress. Bankers recall that only about a year ago rail earnings were running at record levels.

The stock market shows a net loss in the price index of 90 shares of 3 2-5 points for the week. Professional speculators were restrained from undertaking any ambitious operations by the interruption of the holiday on Thursday. Furthermore, news developments were too mixed to provide much impetus in either direction. Also, the market has now repeatedly met strong resistance around the peak of the recovery from the November 10 lows, and there is a feeling in some quarters that those lows may have to be tested before the advance can be resumed.

Much of the financial community, however, would be content to see the stock market hold to a narrow trading area until impressive signs of general business recovery appear, or at least until the bond market manages to resume its advance.

UNIMPORTANT CURB CHANGES ARE NOTED

Prices Weaken on Friday; Traders Look Forward to Stabilization.

GOLDMAN SACHS SCORES

New York, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—The curb market starts the last month of the year with prices in a rather soggy condition, although movements on both sides have been narrow, the absence of any sustained demand and the readiness to sell on the rallies suggests that a period of dullness, in which some degree of stabilization might be accomplished, would be most welcome at this time.

Because of the holiday interruption, last week's movements were insignificant. Prices displayed considerable firmness before Thanksgiving, but softened on Friday and accomplished little or nothing yesterday. The market's most prominent characteristic was its thinness. It took only small buying orders to start an upturn, and on the other hand minor selling sent quotations skidding.

As usual, a few stocks responded to special situations. Goldman Sachs trading ran up a couple of points when the merger of four New York banks was announced, for this investment trust has a large interest in one of the consolidating institutions. However, the shares were unable to hold the advance. Utilities Power & Light also rallied on declaration of a small extra dividend. Diamond Match new recovered from early heaviness when it was learned that prominent interests in the company were endeavoring to persuade the management to declare operative the recapitalization plan. Should the plan fail the new shares would, of course, be canceled.

Oils dispayed weakness. Two of the leaders, Gulf and Humble, broke into new low ground for the year. The Standard group was somewhat firmer, although Standard of Ohio had a sinking spell coincident with the announcement of a gasoline price-cut in part of its territory.

Electric Bond & Share, after selling above 50, turned soft and sagged 5 points from its week's top. Niagara Hudson was in supply most of the week and yielded a point, while American Superpower and other low-priced utilities failed to find many bidders on recessions.

Aluminum Company of America, after selling above 180, broke about 20 points. Great Atlantic & Pacific, in the same group, had a smaller decline. Mining shares, including Newmont and New Jersey Zinc, and the aviation issues were heavy. Amusements held to a narrow range.

Veterans on Program.

Chicago, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Eddie and Fanny Kavanaugh, one of the first of radio's teams, are on the program of WBBM every Sunday afternoon. They have been entertainers since the days of the crystal sets and took part in Chicago's second radio broadcast in 1922.

Find Mountain in Pacific.

Honolulu, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—The Pioneer, a U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey vessel, discovered by soundings off Necker Island a submerged mountain that rose 9,000 feet to within 900 fathoms of the surface.

Woman Dies in Station While Waiting Relative

A joyous home-coming was turned into tragedy yesterday when Mrs. Grace C. Perkins, 72 years old, of Bowie, Md., died in the waiting room of the Union Station, of heart disease.

Mrs. Perkins, with a daughter-in-law, Mrs. H. T. Perkins, and a neighbor, Walter Hardesty, all of Bowie, had just seated themselves in the station to await the arrival of another daughter-in-law from Chicago on the Capitol Limited. As the three sat chatting, the elderly woman suddenly slumped over. Medical aid was immediately summoned but she died almost instantly. Dr. V. C. Buppert, of the Washington terminal, pronounced her dead.

During the excitement the train arrived and the expected visitor on not finding any relatives to greet her proceeded alone to the home in Bowie.

Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt was notified and issued a certificate of death from natural causes. The body was turned over to a Hyattsville undertaking firm. No funeral arrangements had been announced last night.

TWO NAVY OFFICERS AMONG FIVE LOSERS IN BURGLARY WAVE

One Reports $150 and Other $600 in Clothing and Jewelry Stolen.

POLICE INVESTIGATE TWO ARMED HOLDUPS

One Man Is Ambushed and Robbed of $87, While Another Loses $4.85.

Burglars broke into five places in the city yesterday, among which were the homes of Dr. Charles H. Wheatley, U. S. N., and Commander Ralph C. Neehma, U. S. N. Two holdups and one case of pocketbook snatching also occurred.

Dr. Wheatley, living at 3626 Davis street northwest, last night told police that his home had been entered some time during the past two days and clothing and jewelry valued at $150 stolen. The report was the second housebreaking on Davis street over the week-end.

Earlier in the day Commander Needham , 3624 Davis street, asked police to investigate the theft of jewelry totaling $600 from his home. A gold baseball inscribed "Navy 9, Army 5" was among the articles taken from his home.

Stolen Box Found.

Late last night police of the Fifth Precinct recovered a wooden box containing papers, canceled checks and other items, on the banks of the river near the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge. The box bore the name of R. C. Needham, and investigation developed that it was among the items taken from the ommander's home.

Two Negroes who staged a bold daylight holdup are being sought by police on the complaint of Charles Joseph White, a taxicab driver, of 617 F street northwest, who was robbed of $4.85 at the point of a gun.

The robbers hired their victim's cab at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon at Sixth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, a short distance from police headquarters. They directed him to drive out Connecticut avenue into Maryland.

Escape With Money.

At Chevy Chase Circle the pair ordered White to drive into Rock Creek Park. On Beach drive one of the bandits drew a gun, the other struck White on the shoulder with a tire tool, and took his money.

Valuable old coins and paper currency fell into the hands of thieves early yesterday morning when the store of Sam Clipker, 300 E street northwest, was broken into by burglars who then went to the second floor of the building and rifled the pockets of the sleeping proprietor.

The intruders took a very old bill, identified as a "Martha Washington note," a number of one and two-and-a-half dollar gold pieces and other old currency. Only $6 of the loot was taken from the store cash register.

When he awoke and discovered the theft, Clipker reported his loss to the Sixth Precinct. An investigation is under way.

Woman Robbed of Purse.

While walking on G street northwest between Nineteenth and Twentieth streets at 9:30 o'clock yesterday morning, Miss Judith Chaffey, of 714 Nineteenth street, was robbed by a young Negro boy, who seized her pocketbook and fled.

The pocketbook contained approximately $2, together with bank books, cards and valuable papers. The youthful robber wore a brown coat and trousers and a tight-fitting cap pulled down over his ears to hide his features, Miss Chaffey reported.

Thirteen suits of clothing that had been collected in the Episcopal Churches of the city to be donated to the city's needy were stolen from the office of the Episcopal City Mission, 1329 K street northwest, the Rev. George K. Dow, superintendent, last night informed police.

Clothing Worth $135.

The clothing was collected during the week and was awaiting presentation to families where it was most needed. Such collections are regularly made by the Episcopal City Mission and the Rev. Dow distributes the articles to worthy needy families.

In addition to the clothing, a boy's gray overcoat, a lady's strap watch and some small change were taken. The total amount of the loot approximates $135.

Entrance to the mission was gained through a window on the ground floor.

Air Passengers to Use Wireless.

Rome, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Public wireless service from Italian air liners is to be inaugurated soon. The managements of commercial air lines say passengers generally are business men in a hurry or tourists, and they believe the first category of travelers need wireless service and the second will appreciate the novelty of sending air messages.

COMMODITY PRICES SHOW IMPROVEMENT

SLOW RECOVERY SEEN

New York, Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Although security prices have been reactionary, the past week has seen encouraging stability in commodity prices generally. The Annalist weekly commodity price index actually recorded a slight gain, while Bradstreet's food price index was unchanged. Better prices for grains and live stock were balanced by an easing tendency in cotton, hides, rubber and some of the nonferrous metals.

The sugar market was rather uncertain, pending negotiations by the Chadbourne committee, with East Indian and European producers seeking cooperation with the Cuban restriction plans.

The copper situation remained virtually unchanged, with large producers still holding to their 12-cent price and custom smelters selling small quantities at 10¼. One custom smelter, however, raised its price to 11 cents yesterday. The petroleum industry was still unsettled, with isolated cases of gasoline price-cutting appearing, but plans for more drastic prorating of crude production seemed to be developing.

Auto Industry Unchanged.

Recent stepping up of production by one of the larger motor manufacturers has not yet been followed by the industry generally, and in the past week aggregate production was little changed. It is expected that another large producer may shut down entirely for two weeks during December. The industry appears to be developing its 1931 campaign cautiously.

The tendency among manufacturers of lighter lines, such as wearing apparel, radio sets and household wares, was toward the normal, which prevails for a time after the output for the holiday trade is completed. Freight car loadings as reported for the week ended November 15 were the lowest of the year, but the reports for the last two weeks of November should reflect the movement of holiday merchandise.

Both electric power production and building contracts as reported for the third week of the month were bright spots in the weekly quote of statistics. Electric power production showed a gain of 1-5 of 1 per cent over the previous week, and was only about 6 per cent below the like week of last year.

Building Outlook Improving.

F. W. Dodge Corporation's weekly figures for building contracts showed a daily average of $12,571,966, or about $2,000,000 above the daily average for the first two weeks of the month.

The National City Bank in its monthly survey of economic conditions published today points out that business has been declining for fifteen months and is now at a level some 35 per cent below the 1929 peak. "This equals the severity of any previous decline of the past 50 years, and, while not conclusive proof, surely warrants a strong assumption that the decline is nearing its end." The survey adds, however, "that recovery, when it does set in, will be a gradual rather than a rapid process, is quite generally agreed."

It may be pointed out, in addition, that the decline of about 35 per cent from the 1929 peak has taken business down about 20 per cent below normal, as measured by leading business indices, which are weighted for the normal rate of growth over long periods. Going back over 50 years the records show that in every depression consumption has overtaken production around current levels and that the trend has definitely turned upward. Most observers agree that this can scarcely be regarded as a statistical accident.

THE ONCE OVER

THE RAILROAD AND THE BUSES.

SHED a tear for the railroads. They are suffering from unemployment. Insisting that they have been over-regulated to a point near starvation, they are going before Congress with a loud cry for help.

* * * *

Motor trucks, buses and pleasure cars have cut down freight and passenger traffic so much that when a railroad sends out a train these days it is merely taking the engineer and firemen for a ride.

* * * *

Every time a railroad president sees a motor truck it gives him the creeps. And every time he hears an omnibus horn he regards it as a fresh insult.

* * * *

The kick raised by the railroads is that the Government allows trucks and buses to do business without any rules or regulations, while it imposes so many "don'ts" on the railroads that they find themselves backing up while under full steam ahead orders.

* * * *

A motor truck is officialdom's white-haired boy. It just loads up and tears between two given points with the maximum indifference to public safety. It makes even Congressmen jump into doorways and the scream of its siren drives our police to the cyclone cellars.

* * * *

Even the law requiring red lights on the rear after dark isn't enforced, but if a railroad brakeman forgets to go back a quarter of a mile with proper signals when his train comes to a stop he gets 5 to 20 years durance vile.

* * * *

THE truck or bus lumbers along in the middle of the road jelling up traffic and causing drivers of following vehicles to run a high fever and develop dangerous blood pressure.

* * * *

They are monarchs of the highways and rate a salute from motorcycle policemen and three cheers from the traffic cops.

* * * *

They play leapfrog with pleasure cars, forcing lady drivers into ditches, chasing business men motorists up alleys and smacking innocent bystanders for goals from placement.

* * * *

Yet if a railroad train, operating on its own privately maintained tracks, hits a cow there is a congressional inquiry!

* * * *

Once upon a time public sympathy could be found any where except on the side of the railroads. But in any fight between the roads and the motor trucks today the public will be found rallying 'round the steam engines.

* * * *

For a locomotive at least obeys the law, and an engineer never thinks his main purpose in life is to look back and thumb his nose at slower moving vehicles.

THE VERY IDEA!

A barber in New York has offered to shave and cut the hair of the unemployed without charge. But can he refrain from the time-honored tonsorial shop query, "Well, how's business?"

"Man Expires Listening to Radio"—headline. You know how it is.

Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh had Thanksgiving dinner with the Morrows, and what most of us would like to know is whether Lindy, with a fine sense of the appropriate, took the wings.

Mr. Frank B. Kellogg, former Secretary of State, has been awarded the Nobel peace prize of $48,000. Possibly he will use the money to found a dove breeding farm.

Show of Aristocratic Cats To Aid Mission Children

Underprivileged children who are cared for at the Emergency Home maintained by the Central Union Mission, have found new friends among the aristocrats of catdom.

The cats, which are to have their annual show at the Lee House, December 12 and 13, under the auspices of the Columbian Cat Fanciers, got together and decided that they would do their bit to relieve the plight of the youngsters. Proceeds of the show are to go to the home, and the children will be guests of honor on the opening day of the exhibition.

Arrangements were handled on behalf of the cats by Mrs. Mildred D. Anderson, with John B. Bennett, superintendent of the mission, representing the youngsters.

Mrs. Annette H. McCarthy, president of the cat fanciers, and manager of the show, today announced the personnel of the show committee, the members of which are Miss Mary E. Hantzmon, Mrs. Evelyn E. McCoy, Mrs. Amelia M. Olmsted, Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. B. M. Walsh, Mrs. F. O. Pratt, Mrs. Edward Martin, Mrs. B. H. Kohler, Mrs. M. E. Hitchcock, Miss Mabel Turner, L. L. Pruitt, Mrs. Harry Peale, Mrs. William H. Hill, Mrs. W. B. Adams, Mrs. E. G. Davidson, Mrs. Bodier and Miss Anne B. Hacker.
